Bombing by Mail Now Hits Canada

Times News Services

MONTREAL — An apparent international terrorist campaign against Israeli diplomats spread to Canada today with discovery of a booby-trapped letter to the Israeli consul-general here.

Bomb disposal experts detonated the letter bomb some 30 minutes after it was received in the regular morning mail by Israeli consul Pinchas Shaanan. The letter was posted from Holland.

A similar envelope, postmarked Amsterdam, exploded early Tuesday in the London embassy, killing Israeli agricultural expert Dr. Ami Shachori.

Postal officials were checking the mail around the world today for more bombs, and a further 16 were uncovered and either rendered harmless or exploded. Eight were found in London, two in Jerusalem, four in Geneva and two in Paris.

All the booby-trapped letters were believed posted from Amsterdam.

The Arab guerrilla group Black September — responsible for the Munich massacre of Israeli Olympians — was understood to be at the centre of police inquiries.

The letter uncovered in Montreal "was personally addressed to me," Shaanan said. "It was an ordinary, white envelope but it was tightly closed with a sticker. My name was printed on the sticker.

"It looks as if they have the names of all Israeli officials around the world," he added.

Shaanan said the tight closure of the envelope "made it look suspicious" and police were called.

Police said a special bomb unit under Lieut. Robert Cote removed the booby-trapped letter from the consulate, and, under motorcycle escort, sped to a nearby park area where the bomb was exploded.

Israeli officials at the embassy in Ottawa and at the consulate in Toronto said later that no similar envelopes had yet turned up there.

The devices — reckoned by experts to be the most sophisicated murder weapons used by the terrorists — are only about two inches square and can be easily concealed in innocent-looking small envelopes.

There was speculation the killer weapon was the type used by U.S. forces in Vietnam against the Viet Cong. That device, code-named Gravel, is sprinkled from helicopters along jungle trails used by the Communists. It contains two pellets of plastic explosive.

Sources said the bombs

'Black Hole Of Kampala'

Times News Services

A Canadian tourist among the first 20 persons released from detention in Kampala's central police station Tuesday night said in Nairobi they had been crowded into a room "like the black hole of Calcutta."

Fred Romanik, 26, an instrument engineer from Windsor, Ont., told reporters that from the time he was put in the room on Sunday morning until 2:30 p.m. Monday they had been given no food.

Among them, he said, was a pregnant English woman with a baby. They had to sleep on a concrete floor with no blankets, he said.

Romanik, who went to Uganda to see the Great Murchison Falls, said:

"I was picked up on the street by police on Sunday morning and taken to the central police station.

"They said it was only for one day, and when I protested they just ignored me."

Romanik said he was taken to a room about 40 feet by 20 feet lined with cells in which there were about 40 Europeans.

By Monday night there were about 65 people crowded into the small space, said Romanik.

He said he saw five British journalists brought in at gun point Monday night and lined up against the wall and interrogated. They were then put into the cells.

Meanwhile in Kampala a Ugandan military spokesman said today that Tanzania had moved 1,000 troops to its border with Uganda, together with 55 tanks and artillery pieces.

He said the Uganda army and air force would strike at fresh targets in Tanzania if the need arose.

Earlier, Uganda claimed victory over an invading force that thrust into the southwest from Tanzania with the aim, authorities said, of seizing power from President Adi Amin.

A Uganda military spokesman said Tuesday 300 of the invading force, whose strength was put at around

Uganda Asian refugees are not being guaranteed jobs "and certainly won't get them ahead of Canadians," Prime Minister Trudeau said in St. Catherines, Ont., Tuesday.

"They are coming here and taking their chances as the rest of Canadians," the prime minister said as he resumed campaigning for the Oct. 30 general election.

He said that the Uganda refugees would take jobs that Canadians now will not accept.

He had been told that a number of jobs in Atlantic provinces where unemployment is a chronic problem, "now are going begging" because Maritimers would not work at them, he said.

The same was true in such jobs as picking tobacco and jobs in the fruit industry in Southern Ontario, he said.

"It's a fact that there are some jobs that Canadians don't like to do or don't snap up, and perhaps they will be taken by the Asians who want to settle here," Trudeau stated.

Trudeau said he was sure

N.W.T. COURT RUINS SIFTED

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP) — Police and a civilian dynamite experts were sifting through the ruins of the courthouse today attempting to establish whether a blast last night was caused by dynamite or bomb.

An RCMP spokesman in Yellowknife said the force is considering bringing in an expert from another RCMP headquarters to aid in the investigation.

There was no fire after the explosion, which ripped a huge hole in the building in this community of about 3,500 on the south shore of Great Slave Lake.

A man who had mentioned the possibility of the FLQ blowing up the courthouse before the blast occurred was questioned and released. The area was cordoned off overnight and roadblocks were established throughout the region, about 500 miles north of Edmonton.

SHELLS EXPLODE CLOSE TO THIEU

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist artillery today narrowly missed a convoy carrying President Nguyen Van Thieu and three of his top generals in Quang Tri city. Thieu later vowed that the ruined city, recaptured after 138 days of Communist occupation, would be rebuilt.

Far to the south along the central coast, allied officers said the Communists were using civilians as human shields against air strikes and artillery fire. Officers told Bassett the tactic left 20 civilians dead Monday.

Thieu and his party, who paid a visit to the city to congratulate the Saigon troops on their victory, were headed toward a marine brigade position for awards ceremonies when a 13-mm artillery barrage detonated a nearby ammunition dump. There were no reports of casualties.

The convoy quickly spun around after officers flashed a warning to Thieu's motorcade and sped to marine headquarters at Huong Dien, 18 miles to the south. A Vietnamese officer said: "The VC apparently had his timetable." Another officer said "It was a lucky thing he didn't go any farther."

The U.S. command in Saigon said American jet fighters and B-52s Tuesday flew 310 strikes over North Vietnam, most of them in the

NEWS BRIEFS

Blood Liquefies On Schedule

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — The dark crystallized substance believers call the blood of St. Januarius liquefied on schedule Tuesday to the joy of Neapolitans angered by Vatican doubts about their "miracle."

A crowd of 5,000 thronging the Naples cathedral intoned a Thanksgiving prayer when their archbishop, Cardinal Corrado Ursi, lifted the phials containing the reputed blood of the city's patron saint and announced it had liquefied. The ringing of church bells brought the good news to persons waiting outside under cloudy skies.

Fishery Pushed

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. — Environment Minister Jack Davis said today that a limited commercial fishery could play an important role in the management of threatened salmon in New Brunswick and parts of Newfoundland. He gave no indication when a commercial fishing ban of the species will be lifted.

Subsidies Curbed

BRUSSELS (AP) — Turbulence in world market prices for cereals following heavy Soviet grain purchase has led the European Economic Community commission to suspend temporarily grain export subsidies, a spokesman for the EEC said today.

Settlement Reached

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tentative settlement of the U.S. capital's one day teachers strike was announced today.

The strike had forced shutdowns at 56 of the city's 183 public schools.

Rocket Launcher Found in Belfast

Times News Services

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — British Army troops seized a 3.5-inch rocket launcher today and said it was "a very important find."

The launcher was found during a routine search of private houses in the Roman Catholic Andersonstown area, a stronghold of the outlawed Irish Republican army.

It is the second rocket launcher scooped up by the army. The other was seized nearly a year ago.

"This is a very important find," an army spokesman said. Guerrilla rockets have been fired several times, usually to little effect when the warheads did not explode. Also found were some partly-made bombs, a rifle and ammunition.

British forces said they hit two gunmen earlier today in a flarelit battle in a cemetery near Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital, target of threatened attack by the IRA.

DEADLINE PASSES

The battle erupted a few hours after expiration of an IRA-set midnight deadline for British Army evacuation of the hospital grounds.

It focused in and around a Roman Catholic cemetery and Falls Park, areas near the hospital, with troops firing flares aloft to pinpoint the hiding places of at least four gunmen, the British Army said.

Soldiers reported hitting one gunman in the cemetery and another on the roof of a community centre in White Rock Road.

There were no British casualties.

BUSINESSMAN HELD

A Belfast company director was held captive for eight hours Tuesday by a group of armed men, apparently members of the extremist Saor Eire (Free Ireland) organization.

Patrick Mackie, 42, said he was kidnapped as he drove to work, taken to a house in an area he did not know, then finally allowed to walk away in the evening.

Mackie, a director of Mackle Engineering, Belfast's largest engineering firm, said he thought they had wanted to use his car "for a job" but he had no idea what it was.

Saor Eire has been blamed for a string of bank robberies in Ulster.

Canadian Emphasis Urged on Research

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Science Council of Canada today urged that more scientific research in this country be oriented towards "areas of special interest to Canada."

But at the same time, the council added that a significant proportion of that research must continue to be conducted "free from any influences external to the inner logic of science itself."

Report No. 18 on basic research policy objectives recommends that attention should first be concentrated on promoting excellence in basic research of either kind, free or oriented. (See report on Page 53).

Marchand Defends 'Spying'

Times News Services

QUEBEC — While Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand was saying it is perfectly normal for the armed forces to be interested in society's problems, a spokesman for the forces said an investigation has been launched to find out how a document was leaked.

"Do you know any other country in the world where the army doesn't do the same thing?" Marchand asked. "In the United States, in Italy, in France, in Communist China, In Russia, in the United Kingdom . . ."

It is an acceptable practice and no cause for worry, he said.

The document is the report made public by Parti Quebecois Leader Rene Levesque which Levesque said showed the army is spying on Quebec labor unions.

An armed forces spokesman acknowledged there was a report but said it was compiled from public sources as part of a program of information-gathering used to brief senior officers being transferred to other parts of the country.

Meanwhile, a Liberal cabinet minister, C. M. Drury, and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette criticised Levesque.

Drury, who is acting defence minister, dismissed the report's disclosure as an election "gimmick."

"This is part of Mr. Levesque's technique to produce information to see if he can get into a fight with federal authorities," Drury told a small gathering of Liberal party supporters in his riding of Westmount.

Caouette also accused Levesque of playing politics.

"When one is not afraid of himself and is not afraid for his actions, he would not care too much about such reports because reports are made throughout Canada on different activities," he said in an interview.

Caouette said Levesque "is trying again to play politics with his good friend Marcel Pepin, and those people who are trying to break Canada will find anything suitable to them to try and play politics with it."

Korea Question Top UN Issue

Times News Services

UNITED NATIONS — A full list of contentious items including the Korean question is on the agenda for a meeting of the 25-country UN steering committee today and Thursday.

The task of the committee is to decide whether the proposed items should be discussed in one of the assembly's seven major committees, in the main assembly itself — or discussed not at all.

Among the leading questions, in addition to Korea, are international terrorism, financial disagreements, the Middle East, and environmental matters such as sea rights and pollution.

The Soviet Union, China and 26 other countries have requested a full-scale debate on the Korean question.

Those who want the debate are seeking the ouster from South Korea of UN Command troops remaining there since the Korean War. Although 16 countries fought alongside the South Koreans in the 1950-53 war, virtually all remaining troops are American.

Led by the United States and Britain, Western countries will attempt to have any Korean debate deferred for a year. They say that debate on the question would interfere with talks that have recently opened between North and South Korea.

The session opened Tuesday with the election of Stanislaw Trepczynski, a deputy foreign minister of Poland, as assembly president. Trepczynski delivered an inaugural address that dealt optimistically with some areas of world diplomacy but came down hard on the U.S. role in Indochina.

Trepczynski, only the second Communist to be elected assembly president, said the Vietnam war "cannot be justified any longer on logical grounds by any stretch of the imagination."

He referred to Indochina as a place "where blood continues to flow, where innocent people are dying — women and children, whose modest belongings are being destroyed — where the monuments of ancient civilizations are being turned to ruins."

Trepczynski also was disappointed because there have been "no signs of a lasting peace" in the Middle East, but spoke hopefully of new moves toward detente in Europe.

OCTOBER SESSION CERTAIN

Premier Barrett said today there will definitely be a fall session of the B.C. legislature "sometime in October."

The date has not been set, Barrett said.

Barrett made the statement following the first meeting of his NDP government cabinet, which also examined a report from Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi on increases in social assistance payments.

In response to a question, Barrett said there is no truth to the suggestion that the fall session is being planned to disrupt the federal election Oct. 30.

He said if the suggestion came from any politician, his constituents should assess the man's credibility.

the Asians from Uganda would find it difficult to settle in Canada as had refugees from Tibet accepted some time ago.

But he rejected the argument that Canada, because of its high unemployment rate, should not allow the refugees to come here.

If Canada were to open its doors only when it was easy to do so, then "we don't have much merit as a government and Canadians don't have much heart if that is their attitude."

In fact, said the prime minister, if Canada accepted immigrants "only in times of zero unemployment," many new Canadians would not be here today.

Meanwhile in Yellowknife, Robert Stanfield laid down the Conservative policy on the north during a surprise one-day campaign stop at the Northwest Territories' capital.

He had been scheduled to spend most of the day in the Arctic settlements of Inuvik and Tuktoyaktuk, but his plans were washed out by foul weather. So he stayed here, visiting area mines and meeting voters during midtown strolls.

His new-deal for-the-north statement promised improved transportation to help lure more development capital, settlement of native claims by negotiation, and fast action to bring true self-government to the territories, still largely under federal jurisciction.

Also campaigning in the north, Social Credit leader Real Caouette said Tuesday the Mackenzie Valley pipeline can be built using Canadian credit granted through the Bank of Canada.

There is no need to seek American capital and its resulting foreign control, Caouette said in an interview while stranded at Edmonton International Airport.

Caouette said Canada has the manpower and the expertise to tackle the pipeline project, and the financing also could come from the national economic system.

His plans to campaign in the Peace River district were scuttled by foul weather when a chartered aircraft from Grande Prairie couldn't get off the ground.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis said during a Regina open-line radio program that Jean Marchand, minister of regional economic expansion, is using federal grants to buy votes in Quebec.

A few hours later, Mr. Marchand announced a $5.3-million grant for a linerboard plant in Cabano, Que. He denied the grant is being made for political reasons.

Belmont Building Leased

Victoria developer Sam Bawlf has been awarded what Ottawa officials term a "precedent-setting lease" to renovate and operate the Crown-owned Belmont Building in downtown Victoria as a commercial enterprise.

The public works department announced today that Bawlf's investment syndicate, Fort Victoria Properties Ltd., has been granted the lease for 51 years, the first time such property has been made available anywhere for private use.

Once used to house government offices, the eight-storey building at Government and Humboldt will be renovated as an "Edwardian period piece," Bawlf said today, with a mixture of office, retail and entertainment uses.

Bawlf, whose bid was one of about a dozen submissions considered by Ottawa, said his company will invest about $1 million in the restoration.

country's southern panhandle. Spokesmen said the attacks destroyed 17 bridges, 16 warehouses, 25 boats and 18 trucks. The command also announced the loss of a navy jet in the raids over the north.

In awards ceremonies at Huong Dien, Thieu said Quant Tri city would be rebuilt and declared his government would never accept a cease-fire on North Vietnamese terms. He said the Communists "know it will be much more difficult to deal with a re-elected president" because Nixon "rejects the coalition government offer of the North Vietnamese . . . we will continued to destroy the enemy."

Thieu has declared two days of celebrations across South Vietnam in observance of the recapture of Quang Tri.

were made to go off like firecrackers.

Thin strips of plastic explosive were laid inside sheets of stiff paper with a tiny percussion cap.

Whichever way the envelope was opened, the percussion cap was "scratched" by a wire and a spark set off to ignite the blast.

Raymond Troyon, chief Geneva explosive expert, said each letter contained sufficient explosives to kill two people.

Meanwhile, as Israelis called for tighter security against Arab terrorist murders, gunfire exploded again across the Syrian-Israeli ceasefire lines.

The Israeli military command reported at dawn today that Arab gunners inside Syria opened artillery fire on the occupied Golan Heights, near the border region where Israeli forces invaded South Lebanon on an anti-guerrilla mission during the weekend. There were no casualties, and the Israelis returned the fire, the command said.

Syrian shellfire has been aimed at the Golan Heights for more than a week, and most Israelis regard it as insignificant, but Arab terrorist attacks outside the Middle East have set a grim new mood in the country.

The flurry of letter bombs brought a warning from Israeli Foreign Minister that terrorists will get what is coming to them.

1,500, had been killed and 50 captured.

Civilian casualties were estimated at 150, including a white teacher, not yet identified, who was killed in fighting at Mbarara, 160 miles east of Kampala.

The Uganda military spokesman said the invaders were "completely dispersed and scattered" in the area around Masaka, 80 miles west of Kampala.

The Ugandan border village of Mutukula, last of the six towns occupied by the invasion force, was recaptured on Monday night, the spokesman said.

The invaders, claimed to be made up of anti Amin guerrillas and Tanzanian soldiers, had planned a series of killings if the insurgents had succeeded in seizing power, the spokesman said.

He said that on the death list were President Amin, all members of the Uganda cabinet and all people in key positions in government service, along with members of the armed forces who came from the Buganda, West Nile, Karamoja and the Teso districts of Uganda.

In some of these districts the rebels had planned massacres of the whole civil population, the spokesman said.

Early today it was announced that villagers in the border area, armed with axes and long knives, had killed 29 guerrillas and were helping regular army forces hunt down the rest.

Gov't Launches Finance Probe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday night he has launched a review of government finances which will include B.C. Hydro and the crown-owned B.C. Railway.

He said on his return from a meeting in Regina of the three New Democratic Party premiers and federal leader David Lewis that all of the previous Social Credit government's fiscal policies are in the first stage of a thorough re-examination.

He said he met Monday with Deputy Finance Minister Gerry Bryson for a briefing and will continue the meetings.

"At the present time I'm conduoting a review of all the financing policies in this province," said Barrett.

The new premier, who took office last Friday, said his government is also conducting a review of B.C. Hydro's capital requirements for new power developments.

Resources Minister Bob Williams is to release an interim statement Friday on the government's Hydro development policy, the premier said, adding that he intended to spend the weekend studying the recent report on B.C.'s power needs by the B.C. Energy Board.

Barrett said Hydro policy was among topics discussed Tuesday in meeting with Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer and Kim Thorsen, Manitoba minister of industry and commerce.

He said the talks were held at Williams' request.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke will attend the Regina conference of provincial health ministers early in October, Barrett said, with the B.C. minister expected to gather information on how other provinces handle extended and chronic care in hospitals.

The premier also made several remarks on strengthening B.C.'s position in confederation.

"Bennett never deliberately set out to hurt federalism," he said. "In my opinion, it was his style of politics. In B.C., unfortunately, it's always been good politics to kick Ottawa. I just don't feel that's a luxury we can afford any more. I may be wrong politically, I may suffer for that."

NDP Nominates Nanaimo Teacher

A 29-year-old Nanaimo district school teacher was named Tuesday evening to carry the New Democratic Party colors into the Oct. 30 federal election for Esquimalt-Saanich riding.

Roger Smith got the nomination on a second ballot, beating out 43-year-old social worker and ordained minister William Mundy, at a meeting attended by about 100 delegates and interested observers.

A Social Credit nomination meeting this evening will fill out the official slate of candidates for the riding. Smith is so far up against Progressive Conservative candidate Donald Munro and Liberal Louis Lindholm.

The Social nomination being sought by Herb Bruch and John Tisdalle, both former provincial legislature members, is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Ingraham Hotel.

NDP candidate Smith entered a four-way race for the nomination. Ernest Nyeste and Gordon Townsend, the other two contenders, dropped out after the first ballot.

On the second vote, Smith drew 52 votes to Mundy's 46.

Smith, who will "obviously not be teaching for a while," is a published author and new Canadian.

He was born in Liverpool, has lived in Canada for five years and is employed by the Nanaimo School District at Brannan Lake.

SMITH . . . candidate

He is unmarried.

In his address to the meeting before his nomination, Smith drew on the campaign attack of federal NDP leader David Lewis on corporation tax schedules.

The "just society," Smith said, exists "if you are collecting corporation profits . . . if you are an employer."

Canada is not a just society, he added, if you are a fisherman, a farmer or "the average working man."

Voters' Deadline: Oct. 13

The deadline for getting on the voters' list for the Oct. 30 federal election is Oct. 13. Victoria returning officer David Wilson said Tuesday.

After that, only those whose names are on the list will be able to vote, he added.

Wilson said enumeration of voters is completed and 61,856 will be eligible.

Lists of voters will be printed, and copies sent to electors in each polling division as well as pinned on utility poles. This will be done up to Oct. 7.

Anyone whose name is not included, and who is eligible to vote, should contact Wilson (386-2271) and his office will send out a revising agent in the period Oct. 7 to 13.

These new names will be added at the court of revision Oct. 11 to 13 between 10 and 11 a.m. and 7 and 11 p.m. in the lounge of the YMCA. People may attend personally at the court of revision.

The deadline is 11 p.m., Oct. 13.

"Then it is closed and you can't get on the list," he said.

Delay in Ship Controls Criticized

WASHINGTON (CP) — A congressional report released Tuesday criticizes the U.S. government's long delay in issuing regulations controlling the discharge of sewage from vessels.

The report adds that joint Canada-U.S. efforts in common-boundary waters, such as Puget Sound and Juan de Fuca Strait, are "essential in preventing and controlling oil spills."

The report, focusing mainly on the West Coast pollution problem, was compiled by the House of Representatives conservation and natural resources subcommittee headed by Representative Henry Reuss (Dem — Wis.).

It noted that the Environmental Protection Agency had "a 26-month delay" in promulgating vessel-sewage standards. The U.S. Coast Guard, which also must agree on standards before they can be issued, has only set a "target date" of January, 1973, for public hearings.

In a letter to EPA Administrator William Ruckelshaus, Reuss said the delay "may well result in delaying insurance of the coast guard's regulations beyond April 15, 1973, the date promised by the United States in its April 15, 1972, agreement with Canada" on the Great Lakes.

The coast guard should take steps to speed its work "so that the United States will not break its solemn agreement with Canada," Reuss wrote. "Such an occurrence would not bide well for the success of the agreement, so far as Great Lakes water quality is concerned."

The report notes that, while the interior department has estimated that tanker traffic related to Alaskan oil would constitute less than 1 per cent of projected 1980 vessel traffic in Puget Sound, "it is evident that the actual volume of oil transported will substantially increase."

"Obviously, the amount of oil coming into the Puget Sound area is going to depend primarily on the demand for it and invariably that is going to increase," said Rear-Admiral Joseph McClelland, a coast guard commander, in testimony at committee hearings in Seattle, Wash., last December.

Asked whether the projection meant an 80-per-cent increase by the year 2000, McClelland said:

"More than that, sir, I would say. The total now is about 13 million tons. Projected to the year 2000, it would be 31 million."

The report notes that Interior Secretary Rogers Morton announced last May that permission would be granted to build the 800-mile trans-Alaska pipeline to transport hot crude petroleum from northern Alaska to southern port of Valdez. From there, the oil would be transported by tanker to U.S. West Coast ports, including those in the Puget Sound area.

From the Pacific Ocean, tankers would enter Juan de Fuca Strait and, if their destination is the new Atlantic Richfield refinery, would continue through Rosario Strait to Cherry Point.

While Puget Sound, the straits and the surrounding environment were "beginning to feel the pinch of pollution as man and his activities increasingly impinge" on this area, the government's enforcement of oil pollution prevention laws has been "lackadaisical," the report said.

"In 1971, the coast guard reported 8,304 oil spills into U.S. and contiguous zone waters, involving about nine million gallons of oil," Reuss said.

"Over 5,000 of these spills were due to a casualty, rupture or failure of personnel or equipment. But during this same year the coast guard assessed civil penalties in only 145 cases and referred only 372 Refuse Act cases to U.S. attorneys for criminal prosecution."

Barrett Endorses Quebec on Funds

Premier Dave Barrett today said he would endorse the Quebec stand on provinces' right to spending of social assistance funds.

On his way to the NDP government's first cabinet meeting this morning, Barrett said Premier Bourassa's attitude "has my great sympathy — I think they are right on, there."

The Quebec stand was mainly responsible for the failure in Victoria last year of the last federal-provincial conference aimed at rewriting Canada's constitution.

Barrett made a similar but briefer statement on his sympathies to the Quebec attitude at the press conference he held Monday.

Quebec has claimed the constitutional right to the funds spent on family allowances and other like social welfare payments, but Ottawa has refused to give up the right to make payments to individuals.

Prime Minister Trudeau has told Quebec it is welcome to make payments to its citizens of whatever size it wants, but said the province must raise the taxes for them.

Jaycee Unit Organized

George Robbins, the former Victoria Jaycees president, has announced he will head the Saanich Peninsula Jaycees — a new unit created last week to help organize and stimulate young people in the community.

Robbins, who was elected temporary executive chairwill apply for sanction as a chartered member of the Canada Jaycees and official recognition is expected by mid-January.

He said the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce had been the only Victoria area group of its kind and the membership was becoming too large.

The Saanich Peninsula Jaycees was formed last week by 20 young men who officially joined the unit last week.

He said unit projects are still in the planning stages but members will work with youth in the community between the ages of 17 and 21.

"We hope to stimulate a better understanding of community affairs and act as a catalyst to help them participate in the community and get them organized."

He mentioned a possible youth festival, drug seminars and a Jaycee affiliate organized youth committee, which would be concerned with civic problems, politics and pollution.

Blood Short In Victoria

Red Cross blood donor clinics were scheduled for 2:30 to 4:30 and 6:30 and 9 p.m. today at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort.

A Red Cross spokesman said there is "a tremendous shortage" of blood, particularly O-negative.

'Despotism' Viewed In Veto for Mayors

Giving veto powers to mayors would lead us "down the road to despotism,' a lawyer argued Tuesday in a Supreme Court heraing into the continuing North Saanich council fracas.

Lawyer Brian Smith was arguing in B.C. Supreme Court chambers on behalf of a developer who wants a writ forcing Mayor Trevor Davis to sign a bylaw.

The bylaw, twice approved by North Saanich council, would allow creation of the Kingswood development area. Mayor Davis has refused to sign.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton reserved judgment after hearing argument from both sides.

Lawyer Ronald Cook, acting for Davis, said council had failed to comply with all the requirements of the B.C. Municipal Act when it passed the bylaw this summer creating the Kingswood development area.

Cook said this was the mayor's main reason for refusing to sign it.

But Smith argued on behalf of the developer that if the mayor were allowed to have such veto powers over council-approved bylaws, "municipal government as we know it will come to an end."

"We will be down the road to despotism by mayors," Smith said.

Lawyer Cecil Branson appeared on behalf of council, but said he had been instructed to take a "neutral" position.

The bylaw would designate 300 acres in North Saanich as a development area. Council could then enter into negotiations with the developer, Geoffrey Ellis, to sign a two-party land-use contract.

The Ellis plan includes 450 homes and an 18-hole golf course in the Kingswood area.

The bylaw was the subject of heated debate through three readings from March to May before it was adopted June 5. Each time it passed by a 5-2 vote, with Davis and Ald Paul Grieve opposing it.

The mayor then asked council to reconsider, which he is empowered to do. The bylaw was passed a second time July 4, again by a 5-2 margin.

But the mayor still did not sign the bylaw, although he was asked to by a council resolution. The court action followed.

In Tuesday's hearing, the onus was on Davis to show cause why Ellis should not be granted a writ ordering the mayor to sign.

Cook argued that council had not given due consideration to 11 points set forth in the Municipal Act which must be considered before a council designates any area for development.

The points include such matters as health, safety, convenience and welfare of the public, and provision of adequate light, air and access.

Even if aldermen had wanted to consider the 11 points, Cook said, it would have been impossible, because Ellis had provided inadequate information.

He said the bylaw's preamble stated that council had considered the points, and since Davis felt this was not true he could not in conscience sign it.

Smith argued that since it is impossible for Davis to know what was going on in the minds of the other five aldermen, he couldn't know that the aldermen had not given due consideration to the 11 points.

PM HERE NEXT MONTH

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau will not be visiting Vancouver Island during his British Columbia election junket this weekend.

Spokesman Gordon Ashworth, B.C. co-ordinator for his campaign arrangements for the Oct. 30 election, said today Trudeau would be in Victoria "sometime in late October."

A Matter to Take in Stride

It is not a very encouraging indication of the Canadian character to find efforts to make the question of admitting a few thousand Ugandan refugees into Canada an issue in the federal election campaign. Both Prime Minister Trudeau, External Affairs Minister Sharp and other Liberal candidates have been questioned closely on the Canadian offer to accept some of the refugees, who otherwise would probably go to Britain as part of the 50,000 being expelled from Uganda.

Mr. Trudeau has received some blunt questions and he has answered them in the same fashion. To one enquirer, he replied: "If we only accepted immigrants when we had zero unemployment, many of your parents wouldn't have come to Canada and you wouldn't be here now . . . If we're only helpful to people who are in distress when everything is easy, we don't have much merit as a government and Canadians don't have much heart if that's their attitude."

There appears to be fear that the Ugandans will add to the unemployment situation. Mr. Sharp handled that aspect in Vancouver when he said that "we have a responsibility to share our good fortune," but pointed out that some of the immigrants would be skilled professional and commercial people who could well make their own way. He added, "I don't think Canadians want to close our doors." He pointed out that "a few thousand" immigrants would have no appreciable effect on a work force of about nine million.

Mr. Trudeau, speaking at St. Catharines, had been even more direct. Asked who would foot the bill for the Asians to settle in Canada he said: "If there's any bill, it will be footed by the Canadian taxpayer — there's no secrecy about that — just the same as we footed the bill when we brought in 10,000 Czechs . . . and refugees from Hungary . . . and just as we foot the bill every time there's an emergency and people come in in a special way."

The question presents a moral test for Canadians. And while an unemployed person may fear that immigrants will make his position worse, history has shown that immigrants do not create unemployment — in the long run they help to create jobs. Mr. Trudeau expects many of the newcomers to take jobs which Canadians do not favor. We already import tobacco crop workers, domestic servants, coal miners and people for other types of employment which do not attract workers in this country.

Mr. Trudeau and his government are right in their attitude on this question. Canada cannot maintain the image it likes to believe it has if it turns its back on cases of obvious need. No greatness would lie in a tight, barred-door attitude toward suffering humanity in other parts of the world. And while it would be a different matter, as Mr. Trudeau pointed out, to bring in a hundred thousand immigrants overnight, there can be little excuse for becoming fearful of the suggested, but unofficial, total of 5,000.

If this is to be an election issue, then those who vote against the plan will have little to be proud of. But it would be far better if all Canadians accepted the situation in stride and recognized that this country has the capacity and the moral responsibility to help a few unfortunates.

Financing Municipal Government

There cannot be much disagreement in principle with the study announced last week by federal Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford on the problem of municipal financing. The study will cost $232,000 and may be ready in a year.

As Mr. Basford, speaking to the annual meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, reported: "Municipal expenditures over the last decade have tripled and have considerably exceeded (the municipalities') ability to finance them through the property tax." He asked if the property tax was "the best or most effective way to finance municipal expenditure."

Not only the rise in municipal expenditures but the rising mobility of citizens is undermining the viability of the property tax as the principal source of municipal revenue. There have been innumerable schemes advanced over the ages to finance government and if Mr. Basford and his assistants in Ottawa can find other ways this is not likely to end the debate.

Even a perfect financial scheme would have to contend with the constitutional provisions of the BNA Act and the jealousy of the provincial governments.

MAURICE WESTERN

The Real Facts of Employment

OTTAWA — The ticklish problem for any government facing the electorate is to strike an attitude of confidence without sounding unbearably complacent.

If an impression is created that the leadership is unsure of itself and its prospects, problems multiply with such rapidity that the situation soon becomes hopeless. Dissension develops in the party, workers become dispirited, growing political uncertainty may have serious consequences for the business community, one mistake leads to another, and the watching voters draw their own conclusions.

All this is so generally accepted that prime ministers are seldom lacking in the vital ingredient of public confidence. Even R. B. Bennett, doomed before he started in 1935, fairly radiated assurance at one hostile meeting after another.

But confidence can shade very easily into a dangerous complacency, highly irritating to voters. Louis St. Laurent sounded complacent in 1957 and the country revolted. John Diefenbaker created the same impression in 1962, his worst campaign, and for the Conservatives it was the beginning of the end.

Governments face certain temptations to which opposition parties usually are less exposed. Since majorities rule in Parliament and ministers generally have their way, they are naturally inclined to under-estimate opponents. Such attitudes seem to carry over into election campaigns.

Uncertain Guide

Furthermore, politicians and political observers tend to be mesmerized by a status quo mythology which has been shown repeatedly to be a most uncertain guide and which is probably losing in an age of change the core of truth it once possessed.

The theory is that a former MP — and, of course, there are more former government MPs — goes into a campaign with a "cushion" of voters; his majority or plurality at the last election. If he was 10,000 votes ahead at the last election, that is his cushion; he is probably safe. But if he led by a mere 200, he is obviously in peril: the runner-up has only to gain 100 and the plurality is gone.

This is nonsense. All that can be deduced from the returns of the last election is that so-and-so had a cushion on the morning of June 26, 1968. If, in one sense, the federal constituencies are unchanged since that time, in others they have been transformed. Many voters have died; thousands of new voters have appeared. Mobility being characteristic of the times, some have moved to other centres while others perhaps have been drawn in by new developments.

If the electorate has changed, so in many cases have the candidacies. Equally important is the fact that opinions may have changed in response to new situations and new issues. The reliability of polls is uncertain; elections are not decided by surveys, only by vote.

Thus complacency is the enemy of all politicians but especially of those in government.

Mr. Trudeau faces a special problem. For months he was accused by opponents of avoiding an election. He has thus an additional reason to adopt a posture of confidence which may impress voters as overconfidence and thus complacency. Too much perhaps may be made of his initial speeches; the tone may change as the campaign develops.

At this point, however, one has the impression that the prime minister is placing dangerous emphasis on achievements and problems solved; these themes being complemented by philosophical musings about dialogue with voters and the sharing of dreams.

JOHN TURNER
. . . faces issues

Credit should go where credit is due. It seems likely, however—given the apparent mood of the country—that voters are more immediately interested in problems which have not been solved. As for dreams and visions, they are admirable for young governments as John Diefenbaker proved in 1958 and Pierre Trudeau in 1968; it is less clear that they are the best campaign material for governments going to the country after serving a full term.

The Trudeau campaign may change, the prime minister being an astute leader with a marked talent for responding to popular moods. A portent of change may be the quite different campaign being waged by his first lieutenant, John Turner. From the outset, Mr. Turner has recognized issues, treating problems in very serious fashion, analyzing them, conceding shortcomings but making a persuasive case for the overall policies of government.

A good example is the speech of the minister of finance last Thurday at Thunder Bay. Mr. Turner dealt among other things with the charge, brought by David Lewis, that the government's efforts in job creation have resulted in "utter failure." He did not gloss over unemployment but conceded frankly that in this respect Canada faces "one of the toughest economic challenges in the world."

The fact is, that over a six-year period, no less than 1,440,000 Canadians entered the labor force seeking work. This was more in absolute numbers than the total entering the combined labor force of 15 major European industrial nations including Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Sweden. There was, of course, no way of escaping the problem which would have faced any government of any political color in those years.

Heavy Discount

Obviously, there was not total success. But 1,300,000 new jobs were created. If this constitutes utter failure in the eyes of the NDP leader, the judgments of Mr. Lewis must be subject to heavy discount by fair-minded voters. Any party may claim in retrospect that it would have done better. Is this likely? Surely that is the practical question calling for consideration at this time.

There are other Liberals whose approach to the election resembles Mr. Turner's. In Vancouver South, Gordon Gibson, formerly on the prime minister's staff, is fighting to hold the constituency long represented by Arthur Laing. The least that can be said on his closely reasoned speeches is that they show a decent and very high respect for the intelligence of electors in Vancouver South.

Thus in a recent address, of which the text is available, Mr. Gibson dealt in Turner style with the unemployment insurance issue. This cannot be ignored for, as Mr. Gibson notes in most candid fashion, it now appears that "we will be paying out around $1.5 billion to people who are by definition employable and wanting work, for doing nothing at all."

There is far more to this than simple abuse and outright fraud. Mr. Gibson develops a detailed argument, of which the gist is that the public portion of the fund would be better used to create and guarantee work.

While this may put him at odds with some members of the government, it can scarcely be denied that Mr. Gibson is addressing himself seriously to serious issues. In 1972 this may well be the best approach to a mature and critical electorate, increasingly cool to the old-style sloganeering that long was a staple of Canadian politics.

Investors and Loaded Dice

WINNIPEG — In the never-never land of stock market morality who looks after the little guys, the small Canadian investors who have been blistered so often for their timidity in investing in Canadian companies? From a couple of disparate developments in recent weeks, the answer is clearly: nobody. In short, it is the same old answer that has been floating around since the get-rich-quick Wallingfords peddled their watered oil stock and mining shares to the gullible 50 years ago.

The only thing the two above mentioned occurrences have in common is the unhappy fate of the small shareholders. The first concerns the final blow to the small investors in the Bank of Western Canada disaster that never got off the ground. The second involves an offer by Consumers Gas of Toronto to the shareholders of Cygnus Corp. It is now willing to buy their shares at $8 a share, about half what it paid the president of thecompany for his controlling interest in the company a year ago.

Maintain Control

Cygnus Corporation is a Calgary-based company which was the vehicle employed by the late R. A. Brown to maintain control of Home Oil Company Limited. Cygnus' main asset was 1,000,000 shares of Home Oil Class B voting shares. Both companies had capitalization divided into voting and non-voting shares. Because he held a majority of Cygnus' voting shares, 1,300,000 out of 2,500,000, Brown was able to control both companies with an investment tantamount to possession of less than four per cent of Home's total outstanding capital stock.

When Brown got into financial trouble, Consumers Gas made a complicated offer for his control of Home Oil which amounted to about $15 a share for his Cygnus shares which were then selling for under $7 a share for the B stock and under $6 for the non-voting Class A shares.

Understandably angered at being left out in the cold in the Consumers Gas-Brown deal, some of the small shareholders consulted lawyers. Could Brown, or Consumers, or Brown and Consumers do this to them?

Well, they were told, it was at least arguable that they could sue. There was an established body of law in the United States and England which held that control of a company was an asset not of an individual shareholder but of the company itself. Thus a profit made above the market price in the sale of a controlling interest belonged to the company. A corporate shareholder who controlled a company had a fiduciary responsibility toward the shareholders and could not profit at their expense.

What did this legal opinion mean to the holder of 500 shares of Cygnus stock worth $3,500 on the Toronto Stock Exchange? Well he could sue on behalf of himself and all other shareholders to have the Brown profit returned to the company. But if he won his case in court he could be sure that it would be called to the court of appeal, even to the Supreme Court. In the end if he lost, he might be faced with a legal bill for costs of $25,000 or $50,000. Even a small shareholder who happened to be rich would hardly face that kind of a risk for the amount he had invested, or could hope to gain. Nobody sued.

R. A. BROWN
. . . held control

In Winnipeg, however, a couple of small investors did sue. There too the story was full of complications. The promotors of the Bank of Western Canada used a reactivated dormant company as their promotion agency. It was Canadian Finance and Investments Limited. The small shareholders bought stock in this company on the understanding that the company would be investing in Westbank capital stock. The Westbank promotion never got off the ground. An inquiry was held. Prosecutions were recommended but the recommendation was rejected by the attorney-general of Manitoba.

The small investors sued to get their money back. The court's verdict was against them. With but a few thousand dollars invested they could not afford to carry their case to the court of appeal.

In a recent controversy with the financial editor of the Winnipeg Tribune and the Manitoba Securities Commission chairman, the lawyer who represented the small shareholders severely criticized the system which prevents poor litigants from having access to the appeal courts. The lawyer was Samuel J. Drache.

"Unless a citizen can pay the price, the so-called right of access to the courts is a meaningless phrase," he wrote. Because of the number of important questions involved in the suit, Drache held that it should have been carried to appeal. But this would have laid his clients open to risk of a loss of up to $50,000 and he advised them to drop the case.

Does Not Pay

"Smart promoters," he wrote, "don't load prospects with too much stock. When things go wrong it does not pay a small loser to send good money after bad and a poor man cannot afford that pleasure."

The C.F.I. stock distribution in western Canada, he pointed out went to small investors. Fifty per cent of the shareholders bought less than 50 shares, large numbers bought 25 or 30 shares. In Drache's words, the widows and orphans who were the target of this stock-selling operation lost their money, and he predicted that, despite securities commissions, it will happen again and again because promoters know their victims cannot afford access to the courts.

The Cygnus shareholders will not lose their money. Those who accept the Consumers Gas offer will get back their original investment though they will be out the carrying charges on their investment.

But the Cygnus case, with the insiders getting twice as much for their shares as the small investors, and the C.F.I. case, with the investors losing their money, have this in common: they reinforce the well-grounded suspicion of small Canadian investors that the dice are loaded against them. Every time these things happen it makes it more difficult to convince them that the common shares of Canadian corporations are safe places to put their money.

As Drache pointed out in his recent letter to the Tribune, the cumbersomeness of the court procedures makes action to protect the public difficult. The civil law, in his view, is in as much need of up-dating as the criminal law so that civil litigants can get access to them without flirting with bankruptcy.

Turfed Out

Premier David Barrett has given Bennett an assurance that he will not fire or cause to be fired or removed any civil servant from the B.C. Civil Service. I hope he added, willy nilly, because of course when we saw, as of last week, several appointments by the out-going Premier Bennett to the Civil Service higher ranks, one can only wonder how spiked the out-going Premier has left the Civil Service.

To anyone who remembers, and contrary to Bennett's assertions that he did not, the names of at least three come to my mind who were turfed out. Dr. Wallace Gunn, Livestock Commissioner and a most able one; W. Berkeley Montieth, assistant to the Clerk of the House; J. B. Munroe, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, an early retirement. I knew all these men personally. There were others.

Dr. Gunn was the first to be turfed out, for sticking to policies enacted for the benefit of agriculture in B.C. and the Canadian Agriculture Departments systems. Dr. Kidd succeeded him and many of the policies re. the above were dropped.

The N.D.P. administration will have to examine all facets of agriculture in B.C. and put some vitality back into it.

There is also another step they could implement quickly, that is to make car or vehicle-testing province-wide. The present set-up is ludicrous in the extreme. This could be done quite easily by designating reputable and responsible service stations across the province to carry out this necessary function. As it is now, only a few centres are subjected to these large emporiums, whilst the rest of the province's vehicles wander everywhere unmolested.

The people of this province have spoken enthusiastically for the N.D.P. and are looking forward to the inclusion of some sense in provincial government systems. — D. D. Fraser, 1161 W. Burnside.

Asian Refugees Dynamite In Election Climate

By PETER DESBARATS

Many Canadians are upset, judging by Prime Minister Trudeau's mail, at the prospect of a flood of Asian refugees expelled from Uganda being settled in this country. But despite the political implications of the decision, there appears to be no turning back.

OTTAWA — The letter-to-the-editor columns of metropolitan dailies, particularly in Toronto, and mail reaching his own office have indicated to Prime Minister Trudeau that no election issue at the moment involves Canadians as emotionally as the government's policy on the admission of Asians from Uganda.

No count on the prime minister's mail has been released but it is known to be running heavily against the direction of government policy. The prime minister's advisers haven't been surprised by this, nor by the fact that most of the critical letters come from Toronto and Hamilton, two cities that have received sufficient numbers of immigrants in recent years to noticeably alter the composition of their populations, and which can expect to receive a large proportion of the new arrivals from Uganda.

But it has been noted that these letters often appear to come from highly educated people in the professions rather than from workers who normally might be expected to voice the strongest concern about competition for employment. Letters favorable to the government's policy also appear to come mainly from business and professional people but are more evenly distributed across the country, the main points of origination being Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

Swift, Unique

Popular or not, the Trudeau government's response to events in Uganda in the past six weeks has been relatively swift, completely unequivocal and absolutely unique. The record in this respect, as disclosed by officials here, is it began on Monday, Aug. 7, only by three days after President Idi Amin's first pronouncement on his Asian subjects, when the prime minister's office took the initiative in maintaining contact with the situation in Uganda and co-ordinating the Canadian response.

The first inter-departmental meeting took place the following day, primarily involving the departments of external affairs and manpower and immigration. This enabled External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp to make his first statement on Uganda on Wednesday, Aug. 9, when he appealed to President Amin to reconsider his decision to expel an estimated 60,000 Asians from his country.

The following week, while Amin was altering his expulsion orders almost daily, the cabinet in Ottawa gave its first consideration to the question on Aug. 16, less than two weeks after Amin's first statement. The matter was brought to cabinet on the personal direction of the prime minister, bypassing most of the normal preliminary steps. There was no public statement after that meeting but Canada was apparently in a position then to respond positively. The following day, Britain suggested to countries such as Canada and Australia that it would be grateful for help in coping with the large number of Asians expected to leave Uganda.

IDI AMIN
. . . all Asians out

On Thursday, Aug. 24, the Uganda situation was brought before the full cabinet for the second time. The decision was then taken "to ease the effect of this humanitarian problem" by sending a special immigration team to Uganda "to institute a program of admission on an emergency basis."

PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . unequivocal act

There has been no further policy discussion by the cabinet since then, nor is there expected to be, despite the unexpectedly large numbers of Asians who are now applying in Kampala for admission to Canada. A progress report probably will be presented to the cabinet this week. In the meantime, a task force of officials from external affairs and manpower and immigration is meeting daily in Ottawa to implement the "nuts and bolts" of the policy decision.

This has been a complex task at times. The special immigration team, for instance, was delayed in Kenya for several days while procedures of its entry into Uganda were arranged. Once it arrived there, it discovered that no facilities were available for the medical examination of prospective immigrants. A week ago, eight tons of medical equipment were loaded aboard an Air Canada "stretched" DC-8 in Montreal to be taken to Europe and then flown by other carriers to Uganda. A team of seven military medical technicians was also sent to Kampala to operate the equipment.

Air Charters

The method of transporting the Asians from Uganda to Canada remains unclear. It seems likely now that Canada will have to arrange special charters at least between London and Canada. It also is expected that Canada will offer the Asians the same kind of special travel assistance when necessary as various refugee groups have received in the past.

No one yet knows when the first Asians will reach Canada, but it will be soon.

To complicate diplomatic matters, it was only a few weeks ago that Canada's new high commissioner, William Olivier, arrived in Kenya to take up duties in a territory that includes Uganda. Before Olivier could see Amin protocal required that he should present his credentials first to President Kenyatta of Kenya. But Kenyatta was away from Nairobi on vacation and known to dislike doing official business on his holidays.

As a gesture to Canada, Kenyatta agreed to receive Olivier in the small community of Nakuru, and this enabled the Canadian high commissioner to see Amin last Monday.

Canada's response to the situation in Uganda has been markedly different from that of Australia. While recognizing that "there exists a humanitarian problem of great magnitude" in Uganda, the Australian government has continued to do "business as usual" where immigration is concerned. In 1971 Australia admitted 4,696 "non Europeans" and 6,054 "persons of mixed descent" as immigrants, the majority of them from Asian countries.

WILLIAM OLIVIER
. . . our man on spot

Despite the mail reaching the prime minister's office, Canada's public response to the emergency has tended to confirm the government's decision, and has certainly been different than the one in Britain, But it is too early to reach a conclusive verdict on this, or to estimate the importance of public reaction as far as the election is concerned.

Medical Care Is Running Down As U.S. Pulls Out of S. Vietnam

By SYDNEY H. SCHANBERG

SAIGON — The inadequacy of the medical care provided by the South Vietnamese Government to its people is becoming more apparent as American medical support is phased out along with American combat troops.

With American doctors down to a handful and beds in American military hospitals down to a scant 200 — while civilian casualties rise sharply as a result of the five-month-old North Vietnamese offensive — the pressure has fallen hard on the inadequate medical system here.

Visits to hospitals and extensive interviews with foreign and Vietnamese doctors and Vietnamese patients produced these disclosures:

—Of the slightly more than 2,000 doctors in South Vietnam, 1,600 are in the one-million-man armed forces, leaving only about 400 to serve the nation's 17 million civilians.

—Although medical care is technically free in Government hospitals, only special payments to doctors, nurses and other medical personnel will assure any attention.

—For long periods of the day, there may not be a single doctor in a provincial hospital. Its 500 or 600 beds are filled, sometimes with two or three people to a bed. Other patients lie on the floor and still others lie in hallways outside the wards.

—Most Vietnamese civilians admitted to American military hospitals under a special war casualties program had illnesses not related to the war and many were persons of political importance who gained admission by their influence.

—In most provincial hospitals few records are kept, almost no laboratory services are available and sanitation is often nonexistent.

This is the situation at a time when the United States has reduced its medical aid to the Saigon Government to $9 million a year. The cost of meeting the current North Vietnamese offensive, according to the Pentagon, is over $1 billion, and the medical aid is less than 1 per cent of even that figure.

American medicaid has never been very large. In 1968 it reached a peak of $25 million. American medical officials here say that it should be increasing now, instead of falling, because of the mounting civilian casualties and because there are virtually no American facilities left to supplement the Vietnamese ones.

When asked why aid is dropping, these American officials shrug unhappily and say that it is out of their hands, that military aid has always had the overwhelming priority and, if anything, that it has even higher priority now.

More than half the present medical aid—$5.5 million—goes for drugs and equipment rather than for medical services and training.

South Vietnam is sorely short of doctors and other trained medical personnel, and the outlook for enlarging the group is not good.

One of the lowest-ranking countries in the world in medical care, South Vietnam has only one doctor for every 9,000 people. Even this ratio is misleading because of the large number of doctors in the army.

While many of these have private practices as well, they serve only the small middle and upper classes who can afford their fees.

The few private hospitals in Vietnam are accessible only to the rich and influential. The poor go to Government hospitals, usually badly equipped ones in provincial capitals. Many Vietnamese say that only the poor and dying go to them.

Scenes of dirt, inadequate care and bribery can be witnessed at the provincial hospitals all over South Vietnam, but care at the big Government hospitals in Saigon is not much better.

What Did We Learn in School?

RUSSELL BAKER

The children are going back to school again. Time for the old false sentimentality. Time for the tired pieties about education. Roll them out. Send the newspaper feature writers over to Public School No. 17 for one more rewrite of every editor's favorite back-to-school story: Little 6-year-old Adolf Hitler, leaving home for first day of school, weeps for mother; finds compassion among schoolmates.

Mom and Dad are thought to be touched by such stuff. Indeed, they may be, if mom and dad really exist anywhere, which seems doubtful, mercifully, despite their frequent appearances in the press and on television cheering new records in bomb tonnage and stoning small children.

Why do we who are 30, 40, 50, 60, 90 years old — why do we find it so hard to remember school as it really was when we were back there doing our own hard time at P.S. No. 17 and swearing that we would never, once we came to power, make our own children waste their lives in such a fashion?

That last is probably wrong. Surely wrong. Another example of age sweetening bitter reality. When we were in school, to be perfectly candid about it, we were incapable of thinking of our own posterity, of nursing noble intentions for the pending generation. We were too absorbed in our own misery. Humanitarian forethought rises from the life of ease, comfort, power. Philanthropy comes easily for Andrew Carnegie: for Bill Sykes, not at all.

No, we almost certainly didn't have any energy or spirit for weighing future projects. School was a long-term jail sentence. Re-entering through the clanging doors in September, we tried not to think ahead to the next June's freedom, for contemplating the remoteness of June could drive us mad.

In this place where 30 minutes lasted 24 hours, next June was 20 years away. You served your sentence one day at a time. Occasionally there was a teacher who was competent, and the clock stirred and moved. Once or twice for most of us probably, there was a teacher who was inspiring, and in that endless gray corridor of time where we spent childhood trapped we still remember precious patches of light.

The schoolyard was often savage, particularly for boys, whom the code of the place subjected to dismal rites of manhood. The new boy, of course, had to be tested in bare-knuckle combat. This usually meant being beaten up, since ruling power groups, in the school yard as in the White House, commonly assign far more muscle than is necessary to the job of policing upstarts. There we learned that bloody humiliations and terror support the stability of the social order.

School taught dreadful lessons like that. Adults were constantly telling us how lucky we were to be getting an education, by which they meant that we were being stuffed with the sort of material which, if amply regurgitated at examination time, would win us high school diplomas and the right to a job in which we would sit at a desk, talk to a telephone and not build or repair anything interesting.

To qualify nowadays for a high-paying job that produces nothing worth making, you have to go all the way through college, if not further, but for a long time a high-school diploma was considered adequate. By the time we arrived in high school, we had been taught most of what we would need to know.

Those among us who were cunning had learned the importance of grades. Good grades meant that you were getting ahead, and because we soon perceived that it was important to get ahead whether we were learning anything or not, we became grade pursuers of intense, Byzantine artifice.

Ah, how we mastered the art of conning teachers, of telling them what they wanted to hear, of giving them the line they were being paid to hear us pour out! This is an art highly valued by educators today, apparently; defenders of the universal multiple-choice testing empire, dealing with complaints that their tests fail the unorthodox, imaginative answer, reply that this is as it should be. The man educated for today's society, they say, should be able to perceive what answer is expected of him and to give it.

Here is part of the explanation, probably, of why so many of us despised mathematics. In arithmetic the con wouldn't work. You either knew that 8 times 7 was whatever-it-may be, or you were wrong. So to get the grade, you applied yourself, as they used to say.

Thus, education also became pure drudgery, working away night after night down there in the prison laundry to earn your freedom one of these days by remembering that 8 times 7 was some ridiculous sum, and swearing a blood oath to hate mathematics for the rest of your days once you were safely outside the walls, just as you were going to hate that kid who had blooded your nose in the schoolyard . . .

What we were really learning was to hate education.

Most parents will probably disagree with this. Every move to change the nature of schooling is resisted with a ferocity suggesting that parents think it is worth dying for on the barricades. The worst burn buses and abuse children; the best petition for the removal of the unorthodox teacher.

All of us go watery behind the eyes when the children go back to school again, forgetting that we voted last spring to abandon the school system rather than pay another dime on the property tax to renovate the schoolhouse.

Why does back-to-school time make us feel good all over? Because we feel that those children are going to learn in that school the same good old tough lessons we learned there, and grow up to be good people, like us.

As for new boys in town — sorry about this, fellows — it looks like the usual beatings this week. But cheer up, that's school days! School days! Dear old golden — hah! — days.

Dispute Sparks Wheat Sales Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two full-scale investigations—one before the Nov. 7 general election, one afterward—have been promised in the escalating dispute over wheat sales to the Soviet Union.

The pre-election investigation by the FBI was announced by Vice-President Spiro Agnew while campaigning Tuesday in Minneapolis. In fact, he said, "that investigation is in progress" at President Nixon's orders.

But the FBI said it had received no instructions to look into the matter. A spokesman for its parent agency, the justice department, Tuesday night would say only that "a preliminary review of the matter referred to by Vice-President Agnew is under way."

An Iowa Democrat, Representative Neal Smith, promised a House of Representatives investigation of the wheat deal next February "after the passion of election-year politics has passed." Smith heads a subcommittee on small business.

At a Minneapolis news conference, Agnew said that Nixon ordered the FBI to check whether major grain exporters received, and profited, from advance sales information allegedly fed to them by officials and former officials of the agriculture department.

Although wheat sales to Russia are considered a boon for U.S. farmers, critics now question whether some farmers were paid prices kept artificially low in order that exporters might reap larger profits.

The farm price of wheat rose in late July and August after the size of the sale became known.

Total purchases of U.S. wheat by the Soviet Union are estimated at 400 million bushels over a three-year period.

Phone Hike Queried

Saanich council is undecided how it should react to a proposed B.C. Telephone Co. long-distance rate hike for operator-handled calls.

Municipal administrator John Tribe was instructed to study the proposal and report back to aldermen.

"I have nothing but questions," remarked Mayor Hugh Curtis after a brief outline of the proposal was read. The company said the move was designed to encourage direct-dialled calls, and pointed out the current three-minute minimum would be reduced to one minute.

"That reduction in price sounds like and Irish promotion," said Ald. William Noel.

"It is quite likely designed to confuse," added the mayor.

'Shoot to Kill' Orders Given

NEW ORLEANS, La. (REUTER) — The New Orleans police superintendent said his new special unit designed to cut down street crime will have orders to shoot to kill.

Police Superintendent Clarence B. Giarrusso said his new "felony action squad" will be told when they close in on a suspect, and think him to be armed, to give a three word order—"Police. Drop it."

Giarrusso said if the suspect turns around and appears to have a weapon in his hand, the squad has orders to shoot to kill.

The order is the latest in a series of steps to end a wave of murders, armed robberies, rapes and purse-snatchings that has plagued the city in recent months.

Anti-Pollution Spending Jumps In B.C. Mining, Survey Shows

VANCOUVER (CP) — A survey of 56 British Columbia mining companies released Tuesday shows the industry had a record year in 1971, with capital expenditures of $340 million, double the amount spent by companies participating in the survey the year before.

Ten per cent of expenditures went for pollution control equipment.

Ten companies dropped out of the survey for 1971 but nine others were added. The survey was prepared by Price Waterhouse and Co., chartered accountants, for the information of the industry.

The report said the 56 companies employed 18,162 persons at a cost of $180 million for an average per-person salary of $10,986. The figure includes fringe benefits.

Copper led revenue producers, accounting for 32 per cent of total sales by the companerity painted by the report nies studied, with zinc second at 16 per cent and coal third with a 15-per-cent share. Japan was the biggest customer for B.C.'s minerals, buying 52 per cent of the companies' output.

Pollution control equipment was a fast-increasing figure in the study. Companies spent $49 million during the last five years, $34 million of it in 1971 alone, much of it for tailings dams and water recycling systems.

Two trends running against the general picture of prosperity were a sharp decrease in equity capital inflow in 1972 and a 24 per cent decline in expenditures on exploration and development.

A section of the report devoted to ownership and control of the industry said 53.9 per cent of the industry was Canadian-owned, down from the previous year's figure of 54.4 per cent. This was based on the reported residence of individual and corporate shareholders.

Canadian companies controlled by parent firms outside the country were counted as foreign-owned.

OPIC

The Overseas Private Investment Corp. (OPIC) has announced it will pay the Anaconda Co. $11.9 million in investment insurance claims resulting from Chile's takeover of Anaconda's Exotica copper mine in 1971.

OPIC, a government agency which insures U.S. private investment overseas, announced the rejection of two other Anaconda claims totalling $154 million for the loss of other copper mines which OPIC said were expropriated in 1969.

Anaconda board chairman John B. M. Place expressed strong disagreement with the rejection of the $154 million in claims, based on Chile's nationalization of Anaconda's Chiquimata and El Salvador properties.

Venturetek

Venturetek International Ltd., a young company involved in computer technology, announced in London, Ont., it has acquired controlling interest in Pop Shoppes of Canada, a soft-drink company started her in 1969.

Venturetek also has purchased control of Kist Canada Ltd., a Stratford soft drink firm which has been the major supplier of concentrate to Pop Shoppes.

The Canadian Development Corp., financially backed by the federal government, owns 35 per cent of Venturetek.

Officials of Venturetek said they paid slightly more than $1 million for the outstanding shares in the two beverage firms, giving the company more than 80-per-cent control of Pop Shoppes and 55-per-cent control of Kist.

Wardair

Wardair Canada Ltd. reports a loss of $819,096 or 25 cents a share for the six-months ended June 30, compared with a loss of $325,791 or 10 cents in the same period last year.

President Max Ward of the Edmonton-based charter airline said recovery during July and August put the airline in a profit position.

Ward said new international regulations are expected to improve charter operations.

Raised U.S. Quota Boosts Alberta Oil

EDMONTON (CP) — The latest round of increased oil quotas by the United States government is expected to have a significant effect on Alberta.

The oil industry has not yet been able to assess how much more oil will flow into the U.S. because of President Nixon's decision to increase oil import quotas east of the Rockies by 624,000 barrels a day — but more will flow.

Alberta's share of this substantially increased market will be shared with off-shore oil shipped to the U.S. from South America and North Africa.

If the recent trend continues, Alberta could get 30 per cent of the increase, the energy resources conservation board says.

This would increase Alberta oil exports by 150,000 to 200,000 barrels a day and provincial oil royalties would jump by $2 million or more in the remainder of 1972.

The independent Petroleum Association of Canada was pleased by Nixon's announcement Monday.

Stan Milner, president of IPAC, said continuing quota increases on Canadian oil can be expected.

Alberta Oil now sells at $3 a barrel.

Basques Arrested

BILBAO, Spain (Reuter) — nine Basque Communist extremists, mostly youths, were arrested in this northern port on charges of distributing subversive propaganda, police said. Illegal propaganda, a copy machine, typewriters and explosive devices were also seized, police said.

No Price Increase For '73 Cars: GM

TORONTO (CP) — General Motors of Canada said Tuesday that prices for its 1973 cars will not increase from 1972 levels.

The announcement followed the introduction of American Motors products at 1972 prices.

Ford of Canada Ltd. and Chrysler Corp. of Canada said no decision has yet been reached on pricing of their 1973 lines. Ford's 1973 models go on sale Thursday and new Chrysler lines will go on sale next Tuesday.

An American Motors spokesman said his firm's cars "were introduced at essentially carry-over prices."

"Changes were made only to the extent that previously optional equipment has been made standard."

He said an eventual decision on 1973 prices "will be determined largely by what happens in the United States."

He said this parent firm had requested price increases averaging $144 per vehicle but the request,and similar ones from the other three car makers, had been held up by the U.S. Prices Commission.

Commission hearings are under way, but no decision is expected until after the November presidential election.

American Motors has asked for $76 per car to cover the new safety and exhaust emission control equipment required by the U.S. federal government and a further $68 to cover economic cost increases.

AL BAILEY SAYS:
You may have noticed from time to time when partaking of
BEEF STEW
That some of the pieces of meat are dry and tough—while others are tender and juicy—and you probably assumed that this fault lay with the meat.
• In some cases this could be true—but more often the real reason is as explained in the following.
• OVER-COOKED meat is always dryer and tougher than meat that is not over cooked.
• Small pieces cook quicker than larger pieces—so—if your chunks of stewing beef are not of equal size—the small pieces will be over cooked before the larger pieces are done.
• THEREFORE—To ensure tenderness and juicyness in every piece of meat in your stew—be sure to cut the larger pieces of meat to the same size as the smaller pieces—This will guarantee even cooking and a delicious stew.

Terrace Dining Room offers a sparkling view of Harrison Lake while you dine. Adjacent is a late night spot featuring lively piano bar entertainment.

The Caesar's Forum is here — it's just one of our convention and meeting rooms for groups large and small.

Some things shouldn't change. Although enlarged, the Copper Room still features superb cuisine and nightly dancing.

For reservations, see your travel agent, or write Max A. Nargil, Managing Director.

National Chamber's New Head Urges Co-Operation, Liaison

OTTAWA (CP) — The new chief spokesman for Canadian businessmen today suggested formation of a business advisory council for c l o s e r liaison between business, labor and government.

A. John Ellis, a Vancouver banker making his first major speech as president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said:

"The old adversary system between government, business and labor must end. All three segments of our society have a solid challenge in working together to fight our biggest problems — inflation and unemployment — and to keep Canada competitive in our domestic and international markets."

He told the final day of the annual chamber convention his proposed council would meet the prime minister and cabinet as often as necessary "to discuss social and economic issues and legislative matters."

Ellis, 57-year-old executive vice-president of the Bank of Montreal, said federal lawmakers are making a "sincere effort to improve the lot of our populace."

NEED INFORMATION

"However, I believe, that at times they lack adequate information on which to base their conclusions. Consequently, a lack of understanding of realities is sometimes reflected in the white papers produced and the legislation that is enacted."

In an obvious reply to the comments of New Democratic Leader David Lewis on the corporate tax structure, Ellis said the matter is complex and "cannot be glibly discussed in simplistic terms."

"Canadians are among the highest paid workers in the world today. If we are to compete with imports from countries paying lower wages and with a high industrial capacity ... then business must have a viable tax structure with comparable incentives.

"Otherwise, we will definitely be headed towards higher unemployment and slower economic growth. Several of our major trading competitors have a lower effective corporate tax base or various export incentives. It is in this kind of context that the corporate tax structure, including incentives, should be considered."

CONDOMINIUMS POSE INSURANCE PROBLEMS

MONTREAL (CP) — Under existing insurance legislation, individual condominium unit owners not named in condominium insurance policies may not have the right to press for insurance claims or sue for loss, provincial government insurance supervisors said Tuesday.

The association of Insurance Superintendents of the provinces, in a committee report tabled at its annual meeting, said the problem stems from the "obscure" legal position of condominium corporations and individual unit owners.

The possibility of a unit owner not having a right to press for claim could occur if for any reason the corporation declines to make a claim under the policy, the report said.

The association said no legislative solution is foreseen before 1974.

C o n o m i n i u m s are apartments or town houses which the individual residents own.

Insurance officials are currently attempting to work out a formula to provide adequate protection for both the corporation and the individual.

J. R. A. MacKenzie of the Insurance Bureau of Canada said his organization objects to a suggestion that separate policies be taken out for both the individual unit owner and the corporation.

MacKenzie, who is chairman of the bureau's legislative committee, said "insurance on the units and common elements should be the responsibility of the corporation."

Wilson McLean, a lawyer who specializes in insurance, said separate insurance policies for each individual unit owner would cause "horrendous" problems.

The corporation could do the basic job while an individual could take out a separate policy for the protection of his personal property, McLean said.

The superintendents set rules and propose insurance legislation to the provinces.

Auto Mechanics Tune Up Standards of Profession

WINNIPEG (CP) — Tuning up standards in the auto repair trade will be the aim of a planned new organization to be known as the society of automotive mechanics.

Jack Ward of Winnipeg, chosen a vice-president at a founding meeting last week in Calgary, said the group is seeking to obtain a federal charter.

"Once we are a recognized national body — we expect to get the charter by early 1973 — then we can start making better mechanics in Canada."

Ward, interviewed Tuesday, said:

"Right now, it's estimated there are a hundred thousand mechanics in Canada, but how many of them are competent is open to question."

"We have to weed out the shysters."

Ward said the organization is the brainchild of John Woods, a Calgary service station operator who was chosen president at the Sept. 10 meeting.

Woods was behind the chartering in 1969 of a professional society of mechanics in Alberta that now has about 100 members.

Ward said the Calgary meeting, attended by mechanics from Ontario and the four western provinces, decided to emphasize improvement of standards.

M e c h a n i c s passing the courses set by the society would be given some form of recognition, such as a certificate to display in their service stations.

"Right now, in Manitoba, for instance, anyone can go out and hang up a shingle and pretend to be an auto mechanic. The public doesn't know.

"This doesn't mean to say that all mechanics are bad. It's just that the good ones are getting their faces blackened by the incompetent mechanics.

Headquarters for the proposed new national organization would be located in Alberta, until a national office is set up in Ottawa.

Judgment Reserved On Policeman's Appeal

B.C. Supreme Court reserved judgment Tuesday on an appeal by a Saanich police officer against his dismissal from the force.

John Merrifield, 39, of 2306 Harbor, Sidney, appealed the dismissal on grounds that he was denied "natural justice." His case was argued by lawyer Cecil Branson before Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton in Supreme Court chambers.

Branson said the policeman had been denied justice because he had not been notified he was to be dismissed and there had been no hearing to permit him to present his side of the case.

Merrifield was dismissed because, in the view of the police commission, he had been absent from duty for an "inordinately long" time because of spinal illness.

Argument Tuesday centred around the B.C. Municipal Act, which covers dismissal of police officers by their commissions. At issue was whether the dismissal was purely an administrative act or a quasi-judicial one.

Branson said the Act allows appeals of commission rulings, and thus made their function a quasi-judicial one.

And quasi-judicial bodies, he said, must adhere to the principles of natural justice and provide notice of dismissal and, if requested, a hearing.

The lawyer said the appeal provision under the Act would be "emasculated" if there were no open hearing on the issue in the first place. Without the hearing, he said, it would be impossible to determine on what basis the dismissal had been made and thus on what grounds to appeal.

Lawyer Darrall Collins, arguing for the police commission, said the dismissal had been a purely administrative act.

The officer had not been deprived of natural justice because none of his natural rights had been interfered with, the lawyer said. It is not a "natural right" for a servant to have continuing employment from his master.

The appeal provisions in the Act were there for cases involving "fraud, caprice or something similar," but did not mean that a hearing had to be held every time a police commission wanted to dismiss a policeman.

He noted that although the Act allowed appeal procedures, it still specified that policemen hold their jobs "at the pleasure" of the police commission.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Closing of a methadone treatment centre for heroin users has forced them to steal to support their habits, a woman addict said in provincial court Tuesday.

Charlotte Anne O'Brien, 21, of no fixed address, was appearing for sentence on uttering and false pretences charges involving $2,275. Judge William Ostler ordered her to spend six months definite and eight months indeterminate in prison.

Mrs. O'Brien said she had been an addict but had no criminal record until a treatment clinic operated by Dr. Jack Patterson was closed down May 30.

The clinic, which was easing heroin withdrawal symptoms through the use of the substitute but non-addictive chemical methadone, was closed after a provincial government grant was withdrawn.

The city's other clinic, operated by Dr. James Laing, was full and could not accommodate the 60 addicts who had been getting methadone at the Patterson clinic.

"I think that if they could set up some sort of clinic for addicts, instead of just shoving them out on to the street, a lot of this wouldn't happen," Mrs. O'Brien said.

"But there's nowhere you can go. Dr. Laing has capacity for 40 patients, but there are a lot more than 40 addicts in the city."

Ostler said he knew there were.

"Young people are killing themselves all over the country," the judge said.

"They are found dead every day. It seems cruel to put you in jail, but it would be even crueller to leave you in the situation you're in."

Mrs. O'Brien has made several court appearances in connection with the charges, which arose after she bought a stolen bank statement for $15 and wrote cheques on the account.

She also had been charged with attempted uttering and breach of probation.

"Since I've been coming to court, I've noticed its just all addicts and people I've known," she said.

An 18-year-old man, given a suspended sentence and a six-months probation Tuesday morning for possession of marijuana, returned to court in the afternoon session to face another charge of possession of marijuana.

David John Barlow, of White Rapids near Nanaimo, was sentenced by Ostler in the morning after pleading guilty. He was checked by Victoria police Sept. 3 and found to have two cigarettes containing marijuana.

After the morning session ended, the court officer found a jacket left on one of the courtroom benches with a small quantity of marijuana in one of the pockets.

Barlow, who was still in the building, identified the jacket as his brother's. Ostler accepted a plea of not guilty and remanded the charge to Nov. 24 before another judge.

★ ★ ★

Ernestine Jacqueline David, 18, of 643 John, was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation for theft under $200.

She was arrested by Victoria police Sept. 18 in a local department store after she stole a $5 watchband. Police found a carton of cigarettes valued at $4.73 which she said she had stolen from another store.

★ ★ ★

Michael George Bell, 27, of 579 Witty Beach, was fined $400 and sentenced to a nominal one-day jail term after he was found guilty following a trial of being unlawfully in a dwelling with intent to commit an indictable offence.

The charge followed an incident June 18 in an apartment at 418 Michigan.

Singer's Lawsuit Dismissed

MONTREAL (CP) — A Quebec Superior Court justice dismissed a $100,000 action Tuesday on the part of singer Shirley Hamer against the T. Eaton Co. Ltd.

Miss Harmer had sought $50,000 for unjust enrichment of the department store chain at her expense and another $50,000 for damages caused to her reputation by the use of her photograph without authorization in a March, 1969, advertisement in the Toronto Star.

The advertisement was a television set promotion.

Mr. Justice James E. Mitchell ordered Miss Harmer to pay court costs.

He held that the "unjust enrichment" claim was not founded in law, even if the facts were proven, because it was not framed according to jurisprudence.

"She recognizes in her action the existence of another and different recourse, namely a claim for damages," Mr. Justice Mitchell said.

He also said the damage to reputation claim was barred in law because it had been filed more than two years after the advertisment appeared.

Bank Robbed

ROSARIO, Argentina (AP) — About 15 armed robbers held two families and 25 bank employees captive until the time lock on a bank vault opened Tuesday morning, then escaped with about $150,000. Police sources said the gunmen held the bank's treasurer and commercial director, and their families, at their homes Monday night, then took the treasurer to the bank in the morning and kept him and the employees at gunpoint until the time lock opened the vault.

Soviet Tax Protested

PARIS (Reuter) — About 20 young Jewish militants chained themselves to the doors of the Soviet tourist travel agency office here for 30 minutes Tuesday to protest the exit tax imposed by Russia on citizens wishing to emigrate. The entire group was detained by police for identity checks.

U.S. Control In Question —Blakeney

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (CP) — More and more Canadians are questioning what has been a complacent acceptance of United States domination in culture and economics, Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney said today.

Blakeney, speaking to a United Steelworkers of America convention, said corporate assets in Canada now are valued at about $60 billion and almost $45 Billion is owned by non-Canadians, mostly Americans.

"So question number one for Canadian nationalists is with so much or our economy controlled from outside our borders, how effective is our political control of our own country?"

As an example of American policies affecting Canada's economy, Blakeney said a few years ago United States branch plants refused to fill orders from China because U.S. policy forbade such trade.

He also said that during the wage freeze in the U.S. one American-owned company in Canada refused to give wage increases to Canadian employees.

NATO Hits Beach

By KEVIN DOYLE

TROMSOE, Norway (CP) — NATO forces were fighting a simulated holding action today and laying the groundwork for a major offensive following a mock invasion of their defensive positions by "enemy" troops.

The activity is part of the largest combined land, sea and air operation staged by the alliance since its founding in 1949.

Nearly 1,000 Canadian troops, most of them from the 3rd Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment in Petawawa, Ont., were among the defending forces meeting the attack which was launched before dawn Monday.

Lt-Col. Philip Spencer, commanding the Canadian contingent in the Arctic exercise known as Strong Express, said his troops performed extremely well Monday.

"They are in fact, doing more than was required of them," he said in an interview at his headquarters tent in a heavily-wooded part of Norway's northwestern coast.

DETECT 22 SHIPS

Meanwhile, United States naval officers said they have detected 22 Soviet vessels in the Atlantic and the seas north of Norway since the exercise started Sept. 11.

Rear-Admiral George Cassell, captain of the anti-submarine vessel Intrepid, said these vessels have not come within a mile of NATO craft.

Another officer said the Russians have been showing "better manners." A recent agreement signed by the U.S. and U.S.S.R. called for better relations on the seas and in other matters related to shipping.

About 14 of the 22 vessels detected were believed to be Soviet submarines, naval officials said.

Monday's "assault" was made by about 4,000 Norwegian forces making three amphibious landings and two direct land attacks. The exercise is intended to test the strength of NATO's northern flank.

ATTACKERS ADVANCE

The attacking forces managed to advance about 20 miles along a 50-mile front from the amphibious landings on the west. They aim to encircle the Allied forces. About 8,000 troops from NATO's mobile command form the defence. British forces took the brunt of the attack.

The Canadians were on their southern flank.

The attack is evaluated by military officials on the basis of what would have happened if the attacking force had been three times as strong.

Later this week, U.S. marines will make a landing in the area from the sea as part of a strategy designed to turn back the assault.

Cpl. John Campbell, a member of the Canadian regiment and native of King's County, Prince Edward Island, was one of a number of Canadians who mentioned that weather conditions here are causing some discomfort.

He said heavy rains have left most clothing soggy and deteriorating roads and trails are making travel somewhat difficult in armored vehicles.

Most troops in forward positions sleep outside in sleeping bags and ground sheets. Cooking is done on open fires or over small gas stoves.

With temperatures in the low 40s during the day and falling below freezing at night, camp clothing becomes doubly uncomfortable.

Stage Set For Battle Of Giants

SEATTLE (AP) — A stunning primary victory by former Gov. Albert D. Rosellini has set the stage for a historic general election campaign in which he and Gov. Dan Evans will both seek to be elected for a third term.

Sweeping aside the long-nourished gubernatorial hopes of State Sen. Martin J. Durkin, Rosselini carried all but a handful of counties to capture the Democratic nomination in Tuesday's balloting.

First-term State Rep. James A. McDermott of Seattle, a 35-year-old psychiatrist, was far back with about 17 per cent of the votes. Rosellini had 47 and Durkin 35 as the returns neared completion.

Gov. Evans took 65 per cent of the Republican vote, almost exactly the two-thirds margin his staff had said he was hoping for, in his primary victory over State Sen. Perry B. Woodall of Toppenish.

Insurance Rip-Off Charged

MONTREAL (CP) — Some accident and sickness insurance companies are not paying out in benefits a sufficient percentage of the premiums they collect, a member of the Association of Superintendents of Insurance of the provinces said Tuesday.

F. A. Swaine, superintendent for Manitoba, said these companies "must take steps either to increase the benefits they pay or reduce the premiums they charge."

He told insurance company officials at the association's annual meeting that some companies are paying out less than 40 per cent of the premiums they receive from insured persons.

He did not name the companies which he described as "heavy volume" sickness and accident insurers. But he said a majority of Canadian companies are well above the 40-per-cent guideline.

The superintendents are provincial government insurance supervisors who set rules and recommend legislation to the provinces.

SETS GUIDELINES

Mr. Swaine's comments followed a Canadian Association of Accident and Sickness Insurers' presentation which set 50 per cent as a possible guide for insurers.

A 50-per-cent payout would mean that insurers should pay out in benefits at least half the money they receive in premiums from insured persons.

Alex H. Jeffrey, chairman of the accident insurers' committee on legislation and government relations, said the superintendents should examine these specific cases. But he hoped "particular companies will be given time to make changes."

Later, Mr. Swaine said the superintendents would like legislation introduced to protect individuals covered by group accident and sickness plans who are cut off from benefits because of a change in the insurance company carrying the group policy.

Morality Ousts Economics

LONDON (AP) — The Church of England has sold its major shares, worth $3.67 million, in Rio Tinto Zinc, the international mining and smelting corporation.

The church said Tuesday the decision was taken because of the firm's plans to mine uranium in South Africa against United Nations advice.

The Church of England commissioners said in a statement the decision was taken after considering "the needs of others who, in different ways, may be affected by the commissioners' investments."

Rev. David Haslam, a Methodist minister heading a campaign against British church investment in South Africa, said churchmen had opposed Rio Tinto's proposed involvement in uranium mining in Bamiba— the UN name for South-West Africa.

The territory is a former German colony mandated to South Africa by the old League of Nations. The United Nations now maintains the mandate is void.

Ex-Official Faces Charge Of Theft

PARIS (AP) — Gabriel Aranda, the former French civil servant who claimed he possessed copies of documents involving 48 top political figures in influence-peddling and corrupt financial deals, was arrested Monday night and charged with theft of official papers.

He was released in his own recognizance by Judge Pierre Galmiche. He had gone voluntarily to a meeting with the judge.

Although he has not made his documents available to the press, they are known to involve figures in the Gaullist hierarchy in real estate deals and alleged influence-peddling.

Aranda, a former television journalist, has maintained he never stole anything, asserting he only made photo copies of the documents, as any outraged citizen might.

That Mysterious 'Public' —Never Underestimate It

Apart from being the sprightliest dialogue to come out of the wastes of TVland in a very long time, the confrontation between William Buckley and Anthony Wedgwood Benn, on the program "Firing Line," briefly ventilated the most perplexing, perhaps the most important question in what we choose to call the western world.

The question simply is whether public opinion, in a democratic way of life that we assume to be controlled by it, matters a damn.

It was Buckley, every inch the spokesman for the elite, against Benn, perhaps the brightest man in the uneven ranks of the British Labor Party, himself of the aristocracy, yet clearly convinced that public opinion, in the long run, determines a democratic nation's future.

When the former minister of technology expressed his belief that the electorate — that is, public opinion in its rare moment of power — is more interested in representatives than in managers I was dying to know if W. A. C. Bennett was watching and, if so, what his reaction might be. If ever there was a classic case of under-estimating the public temper it was that of the man widely thought to be the wiliest politician ever produced in these climes.

In retrospect, it seems clear that Mr. Bennett's undoing lay in a party campaign based on a covert contempt of the average man. The massive departmental advertisements, crassly designed as political promotion with public funds, the television commercials offering the testimonials of Social Credit's strange bedfellows, the extravagant promises of the so-called Kelowna Charter, all seem motivated by a conviction that public opinion is not merely brainless, but purchasable.

It wasn't just Mr. Bennett and his advisers who made the miscalculation. A poll taken by the Vancouver Sun's Allan Fotheringham, asking the prediction of a large number of people presumed to have a finger on the public pulse, showed that, to a man, they expected Social Credit to return to power. This, too, was in the nature of an unwitting expression of contempt for public opinion. I'm not at all proud that I was among them.

The difficulty with assessing the mood or the convictions of the amorphous mass of individuals we call "the people" is that there's no easy reading of their temperature. Cliche or not, the public is an iceberg. The visible part is the opinion of small groups that can only pretend to be representing the mass, through their own vocal convictions. No one at any time can say with certainty what heaving goes on beneath the surface.

There's a great temptation to think the worst of it, as Mr. Bennett apparently did, to believe that it will respond to the carrot or the whip like any other jack-ass.

If, for example, you subscribe to the consumer magazines, you find all-too-abundant evidence that "the people" are readily and ceaselessly conned in the market place.

One such review, covering the field of cosmetics, shows that enormous profits are made from a gullible public, that two-thirds of the total cost of marketing the average cosmetic product goes to advertising, only a third to its manufacture, and the poor, sappy consumer will unquestioningly accept a scandalous mark-up.

★ ★ ★

The author of this particular study concludes that the average consumer, therefore, is easily manipulated, that he may be implanted with fear, in this case the spectre of social failure without using the product in question. Public opinion, in other words, may be created to serve any given end.

I'm not at all sure that you can make this easy generalization. It's true that "the people" may be conditioned by such advertising, that there are feelings of insecurity and a desire to conform that are exploitable. But counter to this there's just as much evidence that the mass of the people have a kind of native, intuitive intelligence that can only be described as common sense.

Those who deal in any continuing way with the public have a vast respect for this common sense.

Retailers will tell you any hard sales technique may work, but that the over-sell will always cause the reaction of skepticism.

Publishers and editors, sometimes accused of tailoring their product for a 13-year-old mentality, do no such thing. "Talking down" to a reader has been demonstrated too many times as the ultimate sin of journalism.

Lawyers will always choose a jury, drawn from this mysterious mass, rather than a trial judge if their client will benefit from a verdict of common sense rather than one based on the subtleties of the law.

A third of all winning race horses are favorites — the public's choice.

Perhaps, in the long haul, it comes down to that familiar quotation: "You may fool all the people some of the time; you can even fool some of the people all the time; but you can't fool all of the people all the time." Abe Lincoln said it. No politician, no one who lives off "the people," should ever forget it.

Breakwater Project Starts Soon

Pacific Pile Driving Company, of Victoria, was low bidder at $179,835 when tenders were opened Tuesday for construction of new breakwaters at Oak Bay Marina.

A spokesman for the department of public works in Vancouver said today the contract should be awarded within days.

★

Bob Wright, president of the marina, estimates that work will begin in about two weeks.

An extension of 75 feet will be built on the present breakwater and a 350-foot spur will be constructed shoreward from Mary Tod Island as shown in picture at left.

The construction is to provide safer moorage during southeasterly winter gales.

Two mainland companies also tendered on the job. Fraser River Pile Driving Co. Ltd. bid $222,846 and the Bellingham Corporation Canada Ltd. of North Vancouver, $269,100.

Midnight Prowlers To Clean Up

At dead of night two men will prowl the streets of downtown Victoria next summer.

But they won't be on dirty business. Quite the opposite.

Operating a specially converted truck equipped with 500-gallon water tank, pump, hose and floodlight, the men will spray city sidewalks in a trial $10,000 program approved by city council's public works committee on Tuesday.

Idea for the April-to September nocturnal washing program came from downtown merchants who found that sweeping has little effect on dusty, dirt-encrusted sidewalks.

City engineer James Garnett warned aldermen, though, that the program may not be without snags.

Damage and nuisance could result from spraying store fronts, under doors and over basements below the sidewalk, he pointed out.

Garnett said the crews will do their best to avoid such incidents, but they could arise and the possibility "must be anticipated and accepted."

Pollen to Press Barrett On Four City Objectives

Mayor Peter Pollen has written to Premier Dave Barrett asking for the NDP government to tackle four problems of immediate concern to the city.

They are:

—The proposed Blanshard Street extension, first mooted more than 10 years ago and never implemented by the Social Credit government.

—The necessity for coming to an early decision on sewage disposal, which Pollen termed a "national disgrace."

—Confirmation that the new government will adhere to past policies of the Capital Improvement District Commission and allocate funds for beautification of the Inner Harbor.

And a request that Victoria's views be considered in future development of the so-called provincial government precinct surrounding the Legislative Buildings.

The last, Pollen said in an interview Tuesday, was probably the most important of the four requests as "this area is becoming, in our opinion, very congested and too concentrated."

He said city council believes that good planning dictates the need for dispersal of government buildings, particulary to the north of the city, so as to avoid concentrated traffic build-up.

"I was delighted to hear this bright, young premier say on television the other night that before anything is done about government precincts they will discuss this with the city of Victoria," Pollen said.

"That's magnificently refreshing compared with the prior government."

Pollen said he stressed in his letter that unless early action is taken on the Blanshard Street extension plan, all "options will be removed" by buildings going up in the path of the proposed highway.

Designed to serve as a major artery feeding the city core, Blanshard was to connect with the Patricia Bay Highway and also, via an overpass system across Douglas, with the Trans-Canada Highway.

New Pitch Next Year For 'Privileged Crew'

Buses waiting to take visitors on sightseeing trips around the city are a familiar sight on the Causeway — but apparently not for too much longer.

Next summer, if city council accepts a recommendation of the public works committee, operators of the vehicles will not be allowed to park on the Causeway outside the Empress.

At its meeting Tuesday the committee also agreed that the number of parking spaces allowed sightseeing vehicles on city streets should be cut from eight to four — but didn't stipulate where these should be.

City traffic engineer Dave Campbell was instructed to recommend where such parking should be permitted.

The subject of Causeway parking has been a sore one in city hall for some months, with repeated complaints about the increasing number of sightseeing and tally-ho vehicles, as well as complaints from several aldermen that the operators should be paying more for their trade licences.

However, Mayor Peter Pollen said in an interview following Tuesday's meeting that he does not consider the recommended parking ban unfair.

In the long term, he said, it will prove beneficial to the community generally and to the operators specifically.

"We are not interested in jeopardizing their livelihood, or their attempts to develop excitement and drama in the tourist industry.

"What we are concerned about is the developing noise, chaos and huckstering on the Causeway."

During the meeting, Pollen told aldermen that the operators are "an incredibly privileged crew" requiring little capital investment and making little cash return to the city where they do good business.

A report from assessor-collector Alf Joyce listed a number of parcels of vacant land within three or four blocks of the Causeway which could be utilized for off-street parking by sightseeing firms.

Under the city's private "charter", of 1919 with the provincial government, the maximum licence fee allowed is $140 per vehicle, and this can only be changed by amending the act.

However, the committee is recommending that the city seek to establish trade licence classifications and fees under the Municipal Act, to give more direct power for revision through the appropriate bylaw.

CITY PAIR KILLED IN ONTARIO

Two Victoria residents were killed and six other persons injured Tuesday in a three-car crash near Espanola, Ont., 42 miles west of Sudbury.

Dead are Cecil Risebrow, 53, of 3120 Yew, and Mary Emma Fairbrother, 58, of 325 Irving.

Television Goes Underground

Television is invading every facet of modern life — and sewers are no exception.

Esquimalt municipality is nearing completion of a two-week sewer inspection project using a closed circuit TV-monitoring system.

Inspecting about 2,400 feet of sewage pipe a day, at a cost of 15 cents a foot, a private inspection firm, Mar-Tech Enterprises, plans to cover five miles of the 28-mile Esquimalt sewer system.

The process, which is being used by a growing number of firms across North America, is relatively simple but calls for highly sophisticated electronic equipment.

A tubular camera, originally designed for underwater oil exploration and costing about $9,000, is pulled on a cable through the sewer pipe, from one manhole to the next.

The picture is monitored on a nine-inch TV set in a truck waiting on the street.

A three-man crew is required for the job, one man in the truck and one at either manhole.

The man in the truck watches the monitor, recording conditions and the position of each service entry into the main pipe. Whenever a problem is detected, such as root intrusions, blockages or misaligned joints, the monitor attendant radios the men on the cable to stop the camera while he photographs the problem on the screen with another 35 mm. camera.

The firm is equipped to produce a video tape of the whole sewer line but since most of the pipe is in good condition the municipality only requires the location and picture of any problem spot.

PAVERS SCOLDED

The Capital Regional District has told OK Paving Ltd. that it has been operating an asphalt manufacturing plant illegally at a gravel pit between Humpback and Sooke Lake roads.

A district spokesman said the letter pointed out that the property is in a limited agriculture zone. Extraction of gravel was permitted "but blacktop mixing plants are prohibited."

Residents have complained about noise and the stench of tar.

Secret School Surveyor Surfaces

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The mysterious man with the secret survey has ended his game of hide-and-seek with local school authorities.

Michael Marshall, vice-principal of Elizabeth Fisher Junior High School in the Sooke School District, came out of the woodwork Tuesday by telephoning local school offices and revealing that he is the man behind a questionnaire mailed out to 900 Victoria residents last week.

Marshall told the Times today he did it all on his own as a summer project and was going to refer the information gathered from the surveys to the Sooke, Saanich Peninsula and Greater Victoria school boards.

"Being a person involved in making minor educational decisions, I realized that there was a notable lack of information available on educational matters," Marshall said.

He decided that there was two ways to get the information he felt would be valuable: have an outside firm do a survey for him or do the whole thing himself.

He decided to go it alone and paid a total of $300 for printing costs, envelopes and stationery. "Now I know what it's like to lick 900 envelopes."

Marshall felt that if he used his own name and position on the letter accompanying the questionnaire forms, people would not take him seriously, so he went to the library and found a name for a firm, Educational Planning Services, which would not violate any laws if he used it.

He signed his name, "M. Marshall," as president of the firm, and sent out the questionnaires late last week.

So far he has received about 25 per cent of the surveys back in the mail, a response he terms "not too bad."

Marshall, who has experience in the marketing research field, still intends to turn his results over to the local school boards for their use and is convinced the information he compiles will prove useful.

He said he didn't think the project would backfire and did not intend it to baffle local educational authorities as it did.

Shortly after his questionnaires were delivered around the city, the Greater Victoria school board received a number of inquiries about the survey. The board knew nothing about it and went to the extent of issuing a press statement dissociating itself from the survey.

When Marshall read of the board's action in Tuesday newspapers, he telephoned all three school district offices and said he was behind the survey and that it was an individual project.

He expects to be able to work on the results over the next several weekends in his spare time.

Burn-Out Sparks Firemens' Hopes

Millstream landfill fire is burning briskly today and officials at Langford fire department are hopeful their attempts to "burn the fire out" may be successful.

Two bulldozers, a front-end loader and seven men are working at the underground fire for the third day, opening up channels and churning up the ground to encourage complete combustion of the refuse.

Once a real fire is going, officials hope there will be less smoke and less chance of it re-igniting next spring.

Project co-ordinator A. J. Chmelaskas said if their efforts to encourage the fire are not successful they will move to the second alternative of spreading the refuse and dousing the fire completely. Heavy rain during the week may force them into this alternative.

Cost of the project is estimated at $1,000 to $1,500 a day.

EDUCATION STUDENT WINS CARL BURSARY

Bruce D. Runyan, a fourth-year education student at University of Victoria, has been awarded the $300 G. Clifford Carl Memorial Bursary by the Friends of the Provincial Museum.

Presented for the first time this year, the bursary is a tribute to the late Dr. G. Clifford Carl, former director of the museum and is given to a deserving third or fourth year student at UVic.

Runyan has worked as a naturalist for the provincial parks branch during three summers.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

By The Associated Press

The winner of this mad, mad, mad American League East pennant chase obviously will be the team that manages to play fewer games than the others in the final two weeks of the baseball season.

Boston was back on top of the pack today, thanks to some friendly clouds that dumped enough moisture on Fenway Park to force postponement of Tuesday night's scheduled game against Baltimore Orioles. The rainout meant the Red Sox couldn't lose-something Detroit Tigers and New York Yankees did quite thoroughly.

Detroit, which had taken the lead the night before thanks to an open date on the schedule, dropped a doubleheader to Cleveland Indians 3-2 and 6-4 to slip into a second place tie with Baltimore, one-half game behind Boston. Fourth place New York lost to Milwaukee Brewers 7-2, but with the Tigers losing twice, the Yankees actually gained a half game on Detroit and remained 2½ games out of first place, now occupied by the Red Sox.

Elsewhere, in the American League, Minnesota Twins topped Texas Rangers 5-3, Kansas City Royals trimmed California Angels 7-2 and Chicago White Sox took Oakland Athletics 8-7 in 15 innings.

Bill Parsons throttled New York on six hits and George Scott and Johnny Briggs tagged consecutive homers for the Brewers.

The loss didn't do much for the Yankees' morale. New York still figures it has a break in the schedule with 10 of 12 remaining games against Cleveland and the Brewers, the East tailenders.

Of course, after what happened to Detroit, the Yankees may have second thoughts over how soft a touch the Indians may be.

Steve Dunning did in Detroit in the opener, cracking a home run and scattering nine hits before Ed Farmer came out of the bullpen to nail down the victory.

After beating Mickey Lolich in the opener, the Indinas completed the sweep as Graig Nettles tagged his 17th homer of the year in the nightcap.

Willie Horton accounted for three Tiger runs with a eighth inning homer.

"You can't win if you don't score runs," said Detroit manager Billy Martin. "And you don't score runs if you don't hit, which we didn't do."

The Athletics and White Sox played a marathon, going through 15 innings, 51 players, and 4 hours, 51 minutes before Chicago won.

It took a home run by Jore Orta to win it for the Sox after Oakland had come from behind twice — once on a two-out, two-run single by Joe Rudi in the ninth inning and the other time on a two-run 13th inning homer by Dave Duncan.

The vital victory kept Chicago's flickering West hopes alive. The White Sox are four games back and Oakland's magic number remains nine.

In the National League, Cincinnati Reds moved closer to the West pennant by defeating San Francisco Giants, 5-4. The Reds lead Houston Astros by 7½ games, and their magic number is four.

The Astros kept alive their slim hopes by defeating Atlanta Braves 5-3. In the East, Pittsburgh Pirates trimmed New York Mets 5-1 and clinched a tie for their division. Montreal Expos defeated Chicago 7-2, St. Louis Cardinals edged Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 and San Diego Padres turned back Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2.

FLYING HOME to score run at Chicago is Boots Day of Montreal Expos, who made it across home plate on single by Mike Jorgensen while Cubs' catcher Ken Rudolph waits in vain for throw from outfield. Expos went on to score 7-2 National League victory over Cubs.

SOVIET FANS WARNED ABOUT 'BOMBARDIER'

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet fans were warned today to expect a tough series of four hockey matches with Team Canada despite the poor performances of the Canadians at home and in Sweden.

The Canadian team arrived from Stockholm tonight, although some of the 3,000 fans flying across the Atlantic for the series have already reached Moscow.

"The Canadians did their best, but failed on their own ice (against the Soviet national team) as well as Sweden," the Communist party newspaper Pravda wrote. "But in Moscow, having increased their preparations, the Canadian team is going to seek revenge."

Pravda writers L. Lebedev and B. Otkalenko noted the Canadian team contains a number of excellent players. They called particular attention to goalkeeper Tony Esposito and to his brother, Phil, described by the Russian writers as "a bombardier."

The Kings: Mobility And a Keep-Fit Plan

Call it what you like, but Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League have already started on their prevent-slump campaign for the 1972-73 season.

"It's Bob's (Pulford's) idea," said General Manager Larry Regan in between words of praise for the Russian team and its domination of Team Canada in the four games of the trans-world hockey series played in Canada.

But if Larry was quick to help praise upon the Soviets in an "I-told-you-so" dispatch, he also had warm words for his new coach, Pulford.

As a matter of fact, he stated, Pulford may already have beaten many of the NHL clubs to the punch in a new evaluation of training techniques.

"This didn't come about because of the Russians showing," explained Regan. "When Pulford agreed to coach the team, he asked for certain things; he got them, and he has a free hand."

One of the innovations here is a new training program. Warmups, stretch exercises, calisthenics, and running are all still a part of the drill, but something new has been added. Weights, barbells and dumbells, are being swung about by the players.

And this is only the beginning. For once the season starts, the Kings will embark on a season-long keep-fit plan, that doesn't include just skating, or hockey between games.

In the Capable Hands of an Expert

At their practice arena in Culver City — they can only get into the Forum at L.A. five or six times a year for practice — they will get the full off-ice treatment by an expert physiotherapist. Not only that but a complete program of muscular development, by weights or otherwise, where improvement or therapy is deemed necessary.

It will be a scientific approach, done in a scientific manner, and hopefully, says Regan, it will help the Kings overcome what Regan, and apparently Pulford, feels is their No. 1 problem: Conditioning, or the lack of it in mid-season.

"When we left here last year, we were fit," explained Regan. "Then we started to go downhill because of double travel (from the West Coast to the East and return) and lack of suitable practice time. This new program, we hope, will overcome that. We feel we are so far behind on the West Coast, we have to spend extra time just keeping the players fit. "Out here we do twice as much travelling as Eastern teams."

Besides, the Kings are taking two leaves out of other books. One is that films of all the Russia-Canada games in Canada, have been ordered, and possibly the games in Russia will be requested as well; and secondly, every player will have a play book, much in the manner of a pro footballer.

These are a part of the Pulford plan, and Kings' players while here, and then later in L.A., will be required to attend lecture series as well as attend study periods on the Russians' style of play.

"Sure, we'll isolate players," said Regan, "If Pulford wishes it. It's up to him. We feel we can learn from these films." In addition, all of the Kings' home games will be filmed for later viewing, and mistakes pointed out.

Crazy?–Like a Russian Hockey Player

"Oh, they impressed me," said Regan of the Soviet team. He should know. He conducted a hockey clinic in Moscow some years ago, and was an admirer then. "I didn't put their programs into practice here well enough," he admitted. "Of course, everybody thought I was crazy, and I know now I slipped up.

"Now," he added, "I think you'll find a big change; if not right away, in a few years. I like to think Bob (Pulford) has already started."

Meanwhile, down on the ice, Pulford was showing off something different in pre-season drills to the Kings.

Regan explained it as "more mobility of operation . . . players not standing still waiting for the puck . . . an attempt to get everybody in the play. Be mobile, that is the key.

"It may take time," he admitted, "but the players seem to like it."

Besides, now if a player forgets what he is supposed to do under certain conditions, he won't have any legitimate excuse.

It will be in the book — the L.A. Kings play book. All players will be required to keep one, and read it, and any suggestion that the new regimen may not go down to well with some players, drew Regan's ire:

"Any hockey player who does not react favorably to change, shouldn't be drawing an NHL salary," he snorted.

"Especially now."

The inference was obvious.

PACER SNAPS WORLD MARK

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP) — Albatross established a world pacing record over a half-mile track Tuesday in registering a time of one minute, 55 3-5 seconds for the mile.

Albatross, driven by Stanley Dancer in the $2,000, non-betting, free-for-all race, broke the former record of 1:57 set by Bret Hanover in 1965.

Warriors Find 'Bellies Better

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies are succeeding where they failed last year.

The Western Lacrosse Association champions, beaten in the 1971 Mann Cup final, Tuesday took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven rematch with Brantford Warriors.

Cheered on by 2105 fans and again getting a solid job of goaltending from veteran Joe Comeau, Salmonbellies came from behind to best the defending champions, 13-11.

"This is a much better team than the one we defeated last year," Brantford coach Morley Kells said. "Unless we start to execute under pressure we will be going home without the Mann Cup."

A difference in the interpretation of the 30-second shooting rule has hurt his club, Kells said.

"Back East we must shoot on the goal or lose the ball. Out here all a team has to do is to take a shot. New Westminster has an excellent ball control team and takes advantage of this ruling."

Ray Bennie and Kerry Gallagher, two of the seven New Westminster players who weren't in the cup final last year, both produced three goals in Tuesday's game. Dave Matheson had two goals and two assists.

Warriors, who raced off to a 4-1 lead and then lost their momentum, also had a pair of three-goal scorers — Ron McNeil and Stan Cox.

It'll All Be in Harry's Book

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

STOCKHOLM (CP) — Harry Sinden, who came out of retirement to lead a group of Canadian professionals in what was supposed to be a conquest of the Soviet Union's amateur hockey team, now is writing a book about the experience.

Team Canada's efforts against the Soviets so far, and against the Swedish national team here, have been anything but a conquest. But that will all be in Sinden's book which he is putting together with the help of Boston author Will McDonough.

"We hope to have it out by November," Sinden said after a team practice Tuesday. "He should have the first half covering the in-Canada part done by the time we get back.

"I'm doing tapes here and mailing them home. It may be we're sacrificing quality for speed, but if it isn't pretty good I won't let it come out."

Sinden said the book would appear in both hard-cover and paperback but that no title has been selected yet.

Sinden and his squad of National Hockey League stars opened a new chapter in their adventure today when they left for Moscow for the remaining four games of the Canada-Russia exhibition series.

The games in Moscow are set for Friday and Sunday and Tuesday and Thursday next week. A game against Czechoslovakia in Prague, Sept. 30, wraps up the team's tour.

After squeezing a win and a tie between two losses to the Soviets in the four games in Canada, Team Canada beat the Swedes 4-1 here Saturday and tied 4-4 Sunday.

In the two games here, the Canadians were disorganized despite avoiding a loss, and the criticism heaped on them by fans and the local press for their rough tactics in Sunday's game produced an atmosphere of gloom around the Team Canada camp.

But the gloom appeared to have evaporated Tuesday when the Canadians turned out for a strenuous drill.

"Spoiled brats—they really worked hard," said Sinden after the workout.

"They couldn't take a practice like that a week ago," said assistant coach John Ferguson. "Today they were joking and laughing."

The high spirits were evident enough during the practice when centre Phil Esposito formed a daisy chain with one squad during cross-over drills.

"There seems to be a new spirit on the club," said Sunden.

"In Canada we tried to fight off the feeling that we were two-to three-goal favorites. Now the feeling is we are underdogs by a couple of goals."

Absent from Tuesday's practice was winger Wayne Cashman who was taken to hospital following complications involving the cut tongue he suffered in Sunday's game.

"He can't eat, drink or talk," said Sinden. "Dr. Jim Murray ordered him into hospital so they could feed him intravenously."

AND A FEW KIND WORDS

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — "The myth of the unbeatable Canadian hockey pros is smashed once and for all," said the Newspaper Expressen, and throughout the Swedish press Tuesday there was continued criticism of Team Canada.

"The games against Canada are over and the rink at Johanneshovs Ice Stadium is spotted with blood", Expressen said.

"But that is not all, in Swedish Ice hockey rough things also happen. Worst of all was that they didn't play as the Swedish sports fans had expected. The myth of the unbeatable Canadian hockey pros is once and for all smashed".

There were, however, a few kind words. Most of them came from Bobby Bystroem, sports editor for Dagens Nyheter, the largest morning newspaper. He underlined that Canada is a team in a class with the best in Europe.

"The difference between Russia and Canada, "he wrote, "is that the Canadians perhaps are millionaires in dollars while the Russians are millionaires in time. And the team which has the best chance to practice wins.

"If the Canadians and Russians started from scratch each season, I believe the Canadians would win most of the games."

Curlers Plan Sweepstakes

REGINA (CP) — A world curling sweepstakes with total prize money of $100,000 will be conducted by the Regina Silver Broom committee in co-operation with the Regina Exhibition Association and Saskatoon's Saskachimo Exposition Ltd.

The sweepstakes will be on the world curling championship in Regina next March with lucky tickets being drawn on the 10 competing teams.

Argos: Theismann Out; Lions: Bunce Moves In

TORONTO (CP) — Normally Joe Theismann's absence from the Toronto Argonaut lineup would be enough to send rival coaches frollicking to their pads in sheer anticipation of their next victim.

Such is not the case for tonight though when the Eastern Conference Argos are host to British Columbia Lions of the Western Conference in a scheduled Canadian Football League interlocking game.

Toronto coach Leo Cahill confirmed Tuesday what had been expected for several days. Theismann went back on the injury list for at least another two games. He broke his ankle in the Argo opener against Montreal on Aug. 3.

Meanwhile, the Lions are going with a new quarterback as a starter. Coach Eagle Keys said Tuesday former Stanford signal caller Don Bunce would start in place of holdover Don Moorhead.

In Theismann's place will be Wally Gabler, the nomadic veteran seeing his second stint with the Argos in three years. Since being acquired from Hamilton Tiger-Cats last month, Gabler has been a pillar of consistency.

Tonight's game, scheduled for 5 p.m. PDT, will be carried on the full CTV network.

With Gabler, who has developed poise and maturity since his first tour in Toronto, Cahill was confident Argos would be in capable hands.

"His play, execution and leadership have been great," said the Toronto coach.

B.C. coach Eagle Keys, however, does have quarterbacking problems.

Of the two in camp, Don Moorhead is the more experienced though less spectacular in his play calling than newcomer Don Bunce.

Tonight's game between B.C. Lions and Toronto will be telecast on Channel 8 and broadcast on radio stations CJVI (900) and CKWX (1130) starting at 5 p.m.

Bunce has hit on six touchdown passes to two for Moorhead on half as many throws, but his interception ratio is one in 7.1 passes to 16.1 for Moorhead, second best in the CFL to Edmonton Eskimo Tom Wilkinson's 25.0.

One key problem Keys has faced in compiling a 1-7 record this year is the 12 new faces in the starting lineup complementing another 12 who are in only their second season with the Lions.

"A lot of them are going to be good," says Keys, "but they have to have time."

Among the "good" rookies are Ron Estay, a defensive end-tackle from Louisiana State, linebacker Ray Nettles from Tennessee and running back Johnny Musso of Alabama.

CBC, WHA Set Television Talks

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says CBC and World Hockey Association officials will meet in Toronto Friday to negotiate television rights to some WHA games this season.

The newspaper, in a front-page story, quotes Don Goodwin, head of the English language sports department of the CBC, as saying the network may be interested in carrying up to six WHA games this season.

It quotes him as saying in an interview he had an agreement in principle with Bill Hunter of the WHA's Edmonton franchise, the Alberta Oilers, but Gerry Davison, WHA president, has informed him he should be dealing directly with the league.

"We're only interested in the four Canadian cities — Quebec, Ottawa, Winnipeg and Edmonton — and we'd like to get into each city at least once when, as with the opener, there's another Canadian team in there," Mr. Goodwin said.

It was previously announced that the CBC would carry the league's Oct. 11 opener in Ottawa between the Nationals and the Oilers.

"We'd like to carry more than six games but I'm not even sure we can fit that many in because our schedule is pretty tight," Mr. Goodwin said.

Prize Junior Stars in Ottawa

By the Canadian Press

Ottawa hockey fans didn't know what they were missing until Tuesday night.

George Ferguson, a prize junior draft choice, was said to be bound for Ottawa Nationals of the fledgling World Hockey Association until recent weeks.

The 20-year-old winger finally made it to the Canadian capital, but as a member of Toronto Maple Leafs, and notched the winner in 2-1 score over Philadelphia Flyers in National Hockey League exhibition play.

In other NHL action Tuesday, Syl Apps clinched a 3-2 victory for Pittsburgh Penguins over California Golden Seals in his hometown of Kingston, Ont., Minnesota North Stars dumped New York Islanders 6-3 at Peterborough, Ont., Boston Bruins beat Detroit Red Wings 4-2 at London, Ont., and Montreal Canadiens edged Chicago Black Hawks 2-2 in Halifax.

ROUGH OPENER

The Toronto-Philadelphia game, before 4,000 fans in the 9,000-seat Civic Centre, bordered on mayhem with 86 minutes in penalties being called in the pre-season opener for both teams.

Garry Monahan for Toronto and Gary Dornhoefer of the Flyers exchanged power play goals before Ferguson beat rookie goaltender Michel Belhumeur with a screened 15-foot shot in the third period.

After Apps broke up a 2-2 stalemate at Kingston, California coach Garry Young removed veteran goaltender Marv Edwards in the closing moments to add an extra attacker.

The move almost paid off when defenceman Dick Redmond rattled the puck off the goalpost behind rookie Dennis Herron, last year with Trois Rivieres of the Quebec junior league.

Stan Gilbertson and Joey Johnston were the California marksmen while Ron Snell and Al McDonough scored earlier for the Penguins.

Minnesota had little trouble with the expansionist Islanders who, in earlier games had lost and tied to Atlanta Flames, another new NHL franchise.

Jude Drouin and Barry Gibbons scored two each for the Stars, veterans Murray Oliver and Dean Prentice adding one each. Craig Cameron, Dave Hudson and Lorne Henning were the New York scorers.

Cook Cougar Spark In Win Over Villas

Victoria Cougars, preparing to start a second season in the Western Canada Hockey League, exploded sharply Tuesday night to defeat Vancouver Villas of the B.C. Junior League 9-3 in an exhibition game at Memorial Arena.

Cougars, after finishing low on the league ladder last season may have found themselves — judging from the exhibition performance.

Three goals, rammed home within a span of 50 seconds late in the second period gave Cougars a 7-3 edge and demoralized the Villas.

Dale Cook, on off-season acquisition in a trade with Winnipeg Jets, contributed some heavy checking and fired two goals and added an assist to pace the Cats.

Newcomers Terry Ewasiuk, Don Williams and Peter Morris chipped in single goals for Cougars along with holdovers Jim Atamanenko, Murray Worley, Al McLaren and Ron Poole.

MORE SPORT ON PAGE 55

Worley scored at 19:04, Williams connected at 19:42 and Cook scored his final goal with four seconds remaining in the second period to send Villas into the third frame in a faded state.

Terry McDonald, Jerry Blanchette and Chris Dyer scored for Villas, down 3-2 after the first period.

Glen Beuckert played for roughly half the game and stopped 12 shots while allowing three goals in his stint. Ron Boucier blanked Villas the rest of the way, making another 12 saves.

Cougars also emerged as the bad guys, collecting a total of 26 minutes in penalties compared to 14 for Vancouver.

TRADE COMPLETED

Cougars, after facing Villas again Thursday night in Vancouver, play host to Vancouver Nats of the WCHL on Saturday night.

Cats and Nats completed a trade Tuesday which will bring right-winger Bob Murdock to Victoria in exchange for Greg Steele. The 18-year-olds were obtained in the equilization draft earlier this year.

Murdock scored 22 goals and assisted on 40 others during 61 games with Brandon Wheat Kings last season. Steele played for Moose Jaw of the Saskatchewan Junior League last season.

Canucks' New 'Pep-Line' Tests Kings Here Tonight

Vancouver Canucks, scheduled to face Los Angeles Kings in a pre-season National Hockey League exhibition game tonight in Memorial Arena, will be banking on some young legs in the forward lines.

Vancouver coach Vic Stasiuk, who replaced Hal Laycoe in the off-season, will partner second-year pros Richard Lemieux and Bobby Lalonde with Ron Homenuke, who played for Calgary Centennials in the Western Canada Hockey League last season.

Now known as the "Pep Line," the trio hammered in five goals in the Canucks' 10-1 victory over Seattle Totems of the Western League last weekend.

Don Lever, the first-round Vancouver choice in the amateur draft, is centering Bryan McSheffrey, another first-year pro, and Don Tannahill.

Veteran Orland Kurtenbach will centre Wayne Maki and Bobby Schmautz while Andre Boudrias will have Dave Balon and rookie Gerry O'Flaherty on the wings. John Wright will play between Danny Sequin and Barry Wilcox.

On the Vancouver defence are holdovers Barry Wilkens, Dennis Kearns and Greg Boddy. Other defencemen are Dave Gunn and Ted Hargreaves, who played with Rochester in the American League last season, as well as rookie Larry Bolonchuk, a graduate of the WCHL Winnipeg Jets.

Dunc Wilson is likely to get the nod to start in the Vancouver net with either Ed Dyck or rookie Bruce Bullock in reserve.

Kings, training here since Sept. 12, have Rogstien Vachon, Gary Edwards or rookie Bernie Germaine available for netminding duties while Neil Komadoski, Paul Curtis, Barry Long, Brian Erickson, Harry Howell and Wayne Lachance will form the blueline corps. Howell and Curtis were with the Kings last season.

Coach Bob Pulford, a rookie himself, will dress 12 forwards, including the Kings' first draft choice, Don Kozak.

Kozak, who starred for Edmonton Oil Kings of the WCHL last season, joins holdovers Bob Berry, Mike Corrigan, Juha Widing, Butch Goring, Serge Bernier and Real Lemieux as well as NHL hopefuls Doug Buhr, Norm Dube, Jimmy Peters, Wayne Chernecki and Doug Volmar.

Game tonight is 8:30.

Salmon Fry-Feeding Shows Early Bloom of Success

Some early data is in and the Amalgamated Conservation Society's salmon fry-feeding project currently under way on three streams around the southern end of Vancouver Island appears to be bearing visible fruit.

In the Goldstream, where fry have been feasting on special pellets since early June, fish now range from five to seven centimetres in length. Fed fry in DeMamiel and Tugwell creeks near Sooke measure from six to eight centimetres.

"Control" portions of all three streams, where fry are not fed, contain fish around four centimetres long.

In addition, the fry receiving this extra food are a lot deeper in the body from fat deposits — ensuring, hopefully, a high rate of winter survival.

Fry in each of the streams are mostly coho, with some steelhead and cutthroat trout mixed in — but all benefit.

Approximately 100 volunteers from seven Greater Victoria outdoor clubs — Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association, RCN Anglers' Association, Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, South Vancouver Island Rangers, Native Sons, Pacific Trollers' Association and the Victoria Canoe Club — were feeding the Goldstream.

★ ★ ★

Three University of Victoria students, Robert Koc, Dwayne Mariner and Brian Smythe, did the feeding in DeMamiel and Tugwell and conducted some of the data-gathering on all three streams under a grant from provincial government.

Since the fall term began at UVic, feeding in the Sooke area has been done by members of the Pacific Trollers' Association under the direction of Al Meadows, who is also a delegate to ACS.

Both the federal fisheries branch and the provincial fish and wildlife branch are supporting the project in a number of ways.

Howard English, an ACS spokesman and co-ordinator of the project, said the goal this year is to double the number of smolts reaching the sea. This would work out to about 4,000 per mile of stream — or roughly 12,000 for the Goldstream.

In an attempt to find out just what happens to the fry that have been fed, data is being gathered on water temperatures as well as size and concentrations of the fish in each stream. Because of the severe spring flooding this year, each of the streams also needed remapping.

One of themost interesting parts of the research involved feeding the fish with "marked" pellets.

★ ★ ★

Under the direction of the projects technical advisor, Dr. David Groves, the fry in De Mamiel and Goldstream received a ration of strontium and terramycin with their feed during a six-day period in the latter part of August.

The strontium marks the tails of the fish and terramycin puts a ring in the bone structure — both of which are detectable with equipment at the federal biological research station in Nanaimo.

Thus the fish are marked for life and may be identified at any stage in their life cycle.

English said the fish will be fed "well into October."

Later, low water temperatures inhibit the intake of food by the fry and little would be accomplished by feeding.

Federal fisheries officer Jack Brooks, who did pioneer fish-building work on DeMamiel Creek, helped supervise the student workers in the Sooke area for the past two years along with English and Groves.

An application for a repeat Opportunities for Youth Grant for the Sooke portion of the program was turned down earlier this year despite a successful inaugural summer and the provincial government later stepped in to fill the breach.

Feeding on the Goldstream began only this year.

The eventual aim of the project seems to be to provide a blueprint that any club in B.C. could apply to streams in its own area — for the betterment of everyone.

O'Shea Stays With Blues

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues said Tuesday they have retained rights to centre Danny O'Shea by sending minor-league goalkeeper John Garrett to Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

O'Shea was obtained last February from the Black Hawks in exchange for centre Chris Bordeleau, who this summer signed a contract with a World Hockey Association team.

Desjardins Ends Pro Grid Career

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouette co-captain Pierre Desjardins has announced his retirement from the Canadian Football League team.

Desjardins, sidelined with a knee operation during last year's pre-season camp, never returned to action and this year more injuries during training kept him out again. His retirement ends a seven-year pro career.

The Junkie . . . a Statistic or a Reclamation Job?

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bluntly, the clinic counsellor hurls the question at the young heroin addict: "How many Cadillacs do you think you have in your arm?"

He intends to shock, to reinforce one of the motivations that pulls many addicts to the clinic — the desire to shed the anxiety of having to earn or steal the huge income to pay for their habit.

It totals more than $16,000 a year — roughly $50 a day.

The scene is the Haight-Ashbury Free Medical Clinic, the first in the United States. It is treating addicts and pioneering research of hard-drug addicts — who they are, where they come from, what they say a "fix" does for them, and what finally happens to junkies over the years.

Haight-Ashbury also is the first free street clinic to receive U.S. federal funds to operate a drug treatment project — $366,000 the first year from the National Institute of Mental Health, with the clinic required to add 10 per cent more.

HOOKED ON SMACK

"We can reach these people," says Dr. George Gay, director of the Drug Detoxification, Rehabilitation and After Care Project, as it is formally known, the clinic's informal operations are carried out in a few old, rambling buildings near the intersection of Haight and Ashbury Streets in the western part of San Francisco.

"We see about 100 kids a day, most of them hooked on heroin, but 15 per cent or more are taking multiple drugs, cocaine or barbiturates in addition to their smack" says Dr. Gay, 41, who dresses in "hippie" style.

"We have real access to these people. If they're not ready really to try treatment, we say, 'OK, there's our soup kitchen. Come back when you're ready.' They come because friends tell them they can expect sympathetic, nonjudgmental aid, no lectures."

About three-quarters are white, 14 per cent black, eight per cent Mexican-American.

Three-quarters are male, but the percentage of females has been rising lately. So has the proportion of middle-class junkies, and even more the percentage of "blue-collar" boys and girls. And a wave of new soldier junkies is appearing, too.

FRIENDS 'HELP'

The average age is 23.3 years. Most become hooked between ages 15 and 25, with a peak now in this area at 20, says Dr. John Newmeyer, a young social psychologist whose epidemiological studies are contributing to understanding how the addict behaves, and why and how he got started.

The vast majority got turned on from the influence of friends, Dr. Newmeyer finds, with only small numbers brought in directly by dealers in drugs.

Dr. Newmeyer asked 270 heroin abusers what they usually did while "high." About half said they felt "mellow," relaxed, tranquil, or peaceably "on the nod." Fourteen per cent said they behaved just about the way they usually do; three per cent said they were basically sociable and talkative, and an equal number said they became active or energetic. Of the rest, 85 gave such answers as itchy, hungry, sexy, going on a self-destroying trip, cool, non-aggressive, bitchy, happy, grouchy, clumsy, smooth, nauseous, giggly, uptight.

Heroin is the "I-don't-give-a-damn drug, the social anesthetic," says Dr. Gay. "The addict can have . . . even a ruptured appendix and not know it. He's literally walking around anesthetized.

"It knocks out anxiety. In an instant flash, you feel good — for just a while. The addict can just look at his shoes and feel happy."

In one year, junkies seen at the Haight clinic said they spent $29 million for smack. Dr. Newmeyer reports $5 million was earned in legitimate jobs, $2 million came from other legal means, and $1 million came from welfare payments.

Cash thefts, as from stores and banks, produced $1 million. Dealing or selling drugs produced $7 million. Prostitution produced $2 million. Thefts of goods from stores, homes and automobiles produced $11 million, the amount paid by fences for goods valued at $33 million.

Dr. Newmeyer has prepared a rough estimate of the probable fate of 50,000 Americans hooked on heroin in any given year of the late 1960s.

Friends and relatives will divert 10,000 to become "clean" after an average of a year of addiction. Before cure they will have cost society $60 million.

Detoxification and counselling clinics will clean another 10,000, after an average of three years of addiction, costing society $3 million for the cure itself, and $400 million in expenses before cure.

Therapeutic communities will clean another 5,000 after an average of five years addiction, costing $5 million for the cure, and $400 million before cure.

Methadone maintenance can help 10,000, after an average 10 years on heroin, with a cost to society before cure of $1.6 billion, and a cost of $160 million to society to maintain them for life.

Another 10,000 will simply burn out, sometime in middle age, with great pain before a vegetable-like existence. They will have been on heroin for 20 years, and have cost society $2 billion.

Another 5,000 will be dead an average of after seven years, costing society $600 million before they check out.

KISS OF LIFE NEARLY KILLS BIRD LOVER

LONDON (AP) — A parrot-lover who gave his pet the kiss of life almost killed himself.

The man was taken to hospital with severe stomach pains and complaining he had eaten some bad food, the public health laboratory service reported in the British Medical Journal.

Doctors were baffled when their treatment produced no results. The man — not identified — grew worse, developing heart and lung trouble.

Then his wife remembered that just before his illness her husband had tried to revive his dying parrot by giving it mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. The parrot died.

The physicians treated the man for "parrot disease" — psittacosis. He recovered.

And, the scientists added, so did his wife. She had contracted an illness akin to influenze from cleaning out the parrot's cage.

Babies May Be Harmed By MSG

By JOHN STOWELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Babies may be exposed to the risk of brain damage if fed foods containing the flavor enhancer monosodium glutamate, at St. Louis researcher testified Tuesday.

Dr. John W. Olney of Washington University School of Medicine said "an industry-arranged whitewash affair" was responsible for allowing the additive "to be used freely in any foods, in any amounts and for any age group."

Olney told the Senate select committee on nutrition and human needs that his original 1969 findings, showing that monosodium glutamate destroys brain cells in infant laboratory animals, since has been duplicated by researchers around the world.

He said the danger to human infants was not negated when U.S. baby-food companies removed monosodium glutamate from their products in 1969. He said infants also may be fed adult foods containing much higher amounts of monosodium glutamate or they may receive doses before they are born or from their mothers 'milk.

"My quarrel is primarily with the infant aspect," he said. "But we must recognize the open question of pregnant mothers and lactating mothers," he said.

Labels on adult foods, he suggested in an interview afterward, "should say this food is not suitable for babies."

Olney said a National Academy of Sciences subcommittee gave monosodium glutamate a clean bill of health in 1970, but its composition showed "a high degree of industry bias and poor qualifications."

"Loyalty to industry must have been foremost on the list, judging from the number of industry-employed or subsidized individuals who sat on the sub-committee."

Citing what he called flawed research techniques and reports by three laboratories supporting the National Academy of Sciences subcommittee's conclusions, Olney said:

"Those who were unable to confirm the Olneys's findings turned out to be almost exclusively from a certain element of the scientific community; a group of individuals who maintain close ties with the food and drug industries; individuals who are highly regarded by those industries as 'food protection authorities' and who function as a team prepared to swing into action whenever a food-safety issue arises."

Senator Charles H. Percy (Rep. Ill.) told Olney that his allegations are "a very, very serious thing."

"These are fine companies and to charge collusion is something that can't be overlooked," Percy said.

Suggesting that would be a good topic for a Senate investigation, Olney said he shares Percy's high regard for the National Academy of Sciences but doubts whether "any agency is above reproach."

New Vote On Death Penalty

WINNIPEG (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang said Tuesday a free vote will likely be held in the Commons later this year on the issue of capital punishment.

The five-year suspension of capital punishment except for slaying of policemen or prison guards expires at the end of the year.

"If we don't act, the suspension would disappear and we would be back to capital punishment for murder generally," Mr. Lang said during an open-line radio program on station CJOB.

"We do propose to have Parliament look at the matter before the end of the year.

"I expect we will see another free vote in Parliament on the issue and quite possibly an extension of the existing law."

Mr. Lang said if the present five-year experiment is continued, the cabinet would probably retain the "prerogative of mercy," allowing it to commute death sentences of those convicted of murdering police or prison guards.

During the five-year period, there were four death sentences handed out to slayers of police and prison guards, and the cabinet commuted all four.

Board Opens Hearings on B.C. Minimum Wage Level

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor urged a $1 increase in the $1.50 provincial minimum wage Tuesday, but employers' groups strongly opposed anything more than a moderate raise in the first hearing by the B.C. industrial relations board on the subject.

Pat O'Neal, a vice-president of the International Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers' Union, said any increase less than $1 would be an "insult."

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, while asking for a regular adjustment of the minimum wage every three years, said the increase this year should be 10 cents, in line with rising costs since the last revision was made in 1970.

And The Canadian Restaurant Association predicted a 20 per cent increase in its members' prices in the province if the $1 increase goes through. CRA president George McVay said it was "incredible" to suggest an increse of 66 2-3 per cent, and suggested a raise of 35 cents instead.

Ray Haynes, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said that a rate of $2.50 an hour would be less than the amount declared necessary to support a family of five by the 1970 Croll senate report on poverty in Canada.

"We suggest that any operation which is so marginal that it cannot afford to pay its employees enough to live might as well go out of business because it is no asset to our economy," he said.

Scant Response to Alcoholic Worker

A program offered by the Alcoholism Foundation of British Columbia for treating chronic drunks on the job is getting scant co-operation from industry.

Miss Cathie Perkins, director of the local branch, said that last year there were 15,000 "industrial alcoholics" in the province causing heavy financial losses to industry and business.

"And yet when we approached companies with our plan based on constructive coercion, personnel managers would say alcoholism is not a problem or they'd rather not make an issue of it," she said.

The problem is not only that of a man or woman being found drunk on the job, said Miss Perkins.

"An alcoholic suffering from a hangover who goes to work is hardly in condition to function at peak or even half that capacity," she said.

And if he stays home to nurse the results of his night-before drinking spree, he's depriving his company of his services.

"Either way, industry is the loser when it has chronic alcoholics on its payroll," she said.

The industrial "lush" is also dangerous to himself and fellow workers while operating machinery or making decisions which could affect the welfare of many people.

"Take executives who might be prone to having two-hour business lunches. They consume maybe two or three drinks and return to work," explained Miss Perkins.

"Back at the office, they dither about appearing to be busy. Then a late-day decision must be made, when they are clearly unable to concentrate."

One company which has set up an in-company rehabilitation program with assistance from the foundation is B.C. Telephone Co.

Program director Ralph Muir, Vancouver, an ex-alcoholic himself, says his company is using the positive approach to employees' drinking problems.

"If a person is frequently absent, especially Monday mornings or the day after pay day, we have the supervisor suggest he or she see the company doctor. If the diagnosis shows these regular "illnesses" are resulting from over consumption of alcohol, the supervisor uses the "constructive coercion."

It means the employee, deemed valuable to the company, but only when he's sober, is asked to submit to treatment or be fired.

"People with drinking problems are more apt to take a hard look at their pay cheques rather than listen to the pleadings of their wives," said Muir.

His company has no statistics yet on whether the program is a success. "And it would be pretty difficult to come up with an accurate number, because such cases come under the file of personal problems," he said.

Mrs. Doris Chudleigh, a counsellor at the local foundation, said she and her colleagues would like to see similar programs started in all large companies.

Recently, the foundation contacted companies and institutions on Vancouver Island to find out whether industry wanted to be included in such programs.

Forty-five interviews were conducted with personnel managers and supervisors. To date, according to the foundation's files, a minimal number of referrals have been made as a result of the interviews.

Introducing the constructive coercion concept, the foundation explains alcoholism is a treatable illness. They encourage companies to treat the alcoholic employee as they would anyone with a chronic health problem.

And it emphasizes company policy on treatment regarding alcoholism, must run from the top down.

"It's no good having a drunken manager who is not answerable to anyone," said Mrs. Chudleigh.

She added that "for too long the office or plant lush has been covered by his supervisors, work pals and family.

"I had a case of a man in his early 60s who had been drinking heavily both off and on the job for years. His company, where he had once operated a machine, was at the end of its rope with him, but were loathe to discharge him as he has such a short time to retirement."

The man has been under treatment for a short time and Mrs. Chudleigh said has made "remarkable gains."

She said many companies fear that by imposing a program on their staffs the firm will be tagged with a label, such as "the company with all those drunks."

But the foundation has found that companies which develop effective control programs soon discover they have won new respect as responsible, up-to-date organizations.

Porno Purge Pushed

LONDON (Reuter) — After a year of investigating pornography, a committee of prominent Britons has urged new laws to push back the permissive society and send more pornographers to jail.

The core of the committee's finding was that Britain's current legal definition of obscenity should be changed.

The committee's 200,000-word report, released Tuesday, lashed out at a pornography boom which, it said, has already created the first "blue film" millionaire and flooded the country with dirty books.

"We are not prudes or killjoys," said a conclusion signed by the 52 members of the privately-sponsored committee, "but we have been made aware of influences at work in our society which endanger the very capacity for real joy by denigrating and devaluing human persons."

The 52 included four bishops, five lawyers, assorted writers, professors and social workers, plus a disc jockey and a pop singer. Committee chairman was Lord Longford, a 66-year-old reformer who served several times as a middle-rank Labor government minister.

Current British law says that an obscene article is one which is judged liable to deprave and corrupt. The Longford definition of obscenity would include articles which "outrage contemporary standards of decency or humanity accepted by the public at large."

The new law would abolish the defence that even though an article is obscene, it would still be published "for the public good" on grounds of artistic or other merit.

BURNED BILLS BACK TO BANK

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal ruled Tuesday that a Canadian $5 bill is a promissory note, and held that the Bank of Montreal is entitled to claim against the Bank of Canada for bills destroyed by fire.

The Bank of Montreal had sent money in the form of bills to one of its Northern Ontario branches. While being transported in a truck, some were destroyed by fire. For trial purposes, a single $5 bill was specified.

Mr. Justice G. A. Addy upheld a Bank of Montreal claim against the Bank of Canada, and Tuesday the appeal court dismissed the Bank of Canada's appeal from the decision.

Samaritan Bill Gets Nod In U.S. House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has approved legislation to compensate victims of crime and the "good Samaritans" who go to their rescue.

The amendment was attached to an omnibus crime bill which passed the Senate by a 74-to-0 vote Monday. The bill also would make it a federal crime to kill a policeman or fireman.

The bill now goes to a Senate House of Representatives conference to resolve differences.

The bill would pay victims for medical and burial expenses, loss of earnings and support, therapeutic costs and child-care expenses to enable one parent to work. Victims would not be repaid for property losses but intervenors—the so-called good Samaritans—would be.

To qualify, losses of at least $100 would have to be incurred. Compensation would be limited to $50,000.

Supermarkets Story's Villian

TORONTO (CP) — Retailers of beef should adopt a "more responsible" policy by reducing the price of meat, Charles Gracey, Toronto manager of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, said Tuesday.

Mr. Gracey, who said last week that producers and consumers are being victimized by pricing policies of supermarkets, said live cattle prices have dropped by $4 a hundredweight in Canada in the last month while retail prices generally were holding steady or going up.

One result of lowered live prices was that some cattle were being held over at the stockyards for better returns.

"If too many are held over, this tends to back up the whole system," he added in an interview. "We would move more animals if the retail prices moved parallel with live prices, and everyone would be better off."

Mr. Gracey conceded that there have been some "slight" downward retail price movements but said they have been "just a token."

"We appreciate the retailers generally," he said, "but when you get into the kind of pricing that has been going on lately, it's got to hurt."

Currency System 'Cracked'

LONDON (CP) — Canadian economist A. F. Wynne Plumptre says the post-war world currency system is "deeply cracked" and predicts that any future system will involve more frequent changes in major exchange rates.

The former assistant deputy finance minister who recently completed a seven-year stint as principal of Toronto's Scarborough College reached these and other conclusions in a special report to be circulated among Commonwealth finance ministers meeting here today.

Plumptre, in his extensive study which likely will play a central role in the two-day Commonwealth meeting, maintains that the 1971 Washington arrangements involving devaluation of the U.S. dollar and adjustments in other major currency rates "effectively papered over some of the cracks."

RELIEF POSSIBLE

But he argues that the system is still "crisis-prone" and that developing countries may have even more to lose from a system breakdown that industrialized countries which appear to be engaging in competitive exchange rate cuts in the struggle to win trade and build up currency reserve surpluses.

Plumptre, who was commissioned by the Commonwealth secretariat to prepare his study for the finance ministers, suggests that an enlarged flow of financial aid to developing countries may relieve defects in the existing system.

This increased aid might be accomplished by allocating to the developing countries in an increased portion of the Special Drawing Rights or so called paper gold distributed as additions to reserves under the International Monetary Fund.

'Civil Rights' Riots in USSR?

VIENNA (WP) — A serious riot in the hometown of Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev during the summer was put down by troops and police after the local party headquarters and other official buildings were damaged, according to reports which reached the West today.

As many as 10,000 persons reportedly took part in the rioting June 25 in the city of Dneprodzerzhinsk in the Ukraine. An undetermined number reportedly were killed in the clash with troops and police, and others reportedly were arrested and remain in detention.

No mention of the incident has appeared in the Soviet press, as far as analysts here are aware.

Dneprodzerzhinsk, a city with a population of a quarter million, is 500 miles south of Moscow. In 1939, Brezhnev was first secretary of the Communist Party central committee in the city, and, after the war, from 1947 to 1950, he was party first secretary for the district that includes Dneprodzerzhink. Many of the present Soviet leadership were recruited by Brezhnev from the area.

According to accounts of the rioting, it began, as have many civil rights disturbances in the United States, with a seemingly minor police incident.

Three drunks reportedly had been arrested and locked in the back of a police van where some inflammable liquid was stored. When one of the drunks lit a cigarette the compartment burst into flame and one of the three died before police opened the door.

A crowd quickly gathered at the scene and began accusing the police of incompetence and misconduct. The crowd grew and became more violent, attacking the police. The violence reportedly spread into other areas of the city as mobs attacked and sacked the local party headquarters, heavily damaging both.

Troop and police reinforcements finally restored order, after a number of the rioters were killed, according to reports.

Servants Angry

EDMONTON (CP) — About 800 members of the Civil Service Association of Alberta are angry at what they claim is a wage freeze imposed by the provincial government.

The men, who earn an average of $900 a month, say the provincial government should not be able to reclassify them as maintenance mechanics and separate their wage rates from tradesmen employed in the private sector.

'Too Darn Expensive' for Union To Fight Court on Foreign Ship

MONTREAL (CP) — The Seafarers' International Union will obey a court order forbidding picketing of a Cypriot-owned ship awaiting unloading at Hamilton, union president Leonard (Red) McLaughlin said Tuesday.

"We always obey the courts. It's too darn expensive not to," he said in an interview. "But we will continue to put the pressure on. It is ridiculous to have foreign ships taking jobs away from Canadians in our own domestic trade."

Mr. McLaughlin has sent a telegram to the Canadian government asking that the ship, the Pampero, be inspected by federal officials.

Testimony was given at the hearings leading to the court order that in some cases salaries paid the ship's Greek and Spanish sailors is less than half the normal Canadian rate.

"In view of the strong possibility that this crew might fall within white slave category, we request that this vessel be denied clearance from the port of Hamilton where she is presently lying until her master has placed her in full compliance with the law," the telegram said in part.

Mr. Justice J. D. Cromarty Monday continued the injunction against picketing until a trial is held on an action by J. S. Ellis and Co. Ltd. of Montreal, who chartered the ship, to recover damages the company claims as a result of union picketing since it docked Sept. 6.

The ship, Pampero, is carrying 10,000 tons of gypsum loaded at Little Narrows, N.S. for delivery in Hamilton.

The Seafarers' union says 1,000 jobs are being taken from Canadians by ships of foreign registry paying substandard salaries and offering poor living conditions for the crews.

Mr. McLaughlin said the SIU plans to continue harassing foreign ships "using the tactic of peaceful demonstration and fighting each case in the courts."

Student Shortage Blight on Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — With 600 fewer students than anticipated, Carleton University could be short $2 million on its budget for the year, president Michael Oliver said Tuesday.

In a report to the university senate, Dr. Oliver said there actually would be 160 fewer students than the 10,690 registered last year, 600 fewer than anticipated when the 1972-73 budget was drawn up.

A $700,000 surplus from last year's budget would take some of the sting out of the reduction, he said, but it marked the first time in 26 years the university enrolment failed to increase.

The financial loss would come not only from reduced registration fees, but also from provincial grants based of the number of students registered.

Both Dr. Oliver and Bruce Cameron, student council president, laid much of the blame on fee increases imposed by the provincial government last spring, ranging from $100 to $400 a student.

"I am disturbed that cost factors, especially the fee increase, may have deterred well-qualified and highly-motivated students from joining us," Dr. Oliver said.

Mr. Cameron said "There's no doubt in my mind the enrolment drop is due to economic factors."

Gift Tax Hassle Studied

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Major changes will be needed in federal-provincial fiscal arrangements in 1974 and 1975 affecting estate and gift taxes and federal aid to higher education, says David B. Perry of the research staff of the Canadian Tax Foundation.

Temporary arrangements entered into by the federal government and the provinces in 1971, and ratified by Parliament earlier this year, will run out then. At the same time, pressure is building up to have municipal governments participate in future federal-provincial conference on taxes, Mr. Perry writes in the latest issue of the Canadian Tax Journal.

The foundation is an independent tax research organization supported by more than 5,000 members, whose governors are nominated by the Canadian Bar Association and the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants. The foundation's 24th annual conference will be held in Toronto in November.

When the federal government was sponsoring its sweeping revision of the Income Tax Act in Parliament last year, it offered special guarantees to the provinces and made other special arrangements with them to ensure their revenues would not be hurt by changes in federal tax law.

The federal government withdrew from the estate and gift tax field, believing that taxes on such transfers of property would be caught up in the new federal tax on capital gains. However, it offered to continue to collect estate and gift taxes for the provinces for three years.

The federal government also undertook to continue the existing scale of federal help to post-secondary school education for a two-year period. There was uncertainty at the time how government revenues would be affected by the new tax law, and the federal government was unwilling to make a long-term commitment in the field of education, where costs and enrolments have increased dramatically.

"Present enrolment trends are baffling the experts and costs are therefore very much up in the air," Mr. Perry says.

The plan of federal aid to higher education now runs out in 1974 and the three-year temporary arrangement for provincial estate and gift taxes will expire in 1975.

Some provinces have lately supported the view of many major municipalities that they should participate fully in federal-provincial fiscal conferences.

The federal government has said that the provinces could, if they wished, include municipal representatives on their provincial delegations. But generally, Ottawa takes the view that the municipalities are created by the provinces, and Ottawa should only deal directly with the latter.

SPIRIT RIVER, Alta. — The mayor of Spirit River is one of three self-styled political revolutionaries prepared to spend $200 to make a point in the federal election.

"It's worth it just to challenge the super-stars," says Rev. Michael Zuk, the town's mayor. Zuk, a United Church minister, is leader of the Revolutionary Political Movement.

Joining Zuk are a retired teacher, Gertrude Bryan of Spirit River and a fellow minister, Rev. Wayne Lovely of Valleyview, Alta.

They will put up the required $200 deposit to become declared candidates. They lose their deposits if they fail to draw half as many votes as the winner in their constituencies.

"It's the only way we can be sure of being heard," said Zuk. "If the other candidates don't want to come, we'll have to go to their rallies. If they don't show up for our forums, we'll have to harass them until they come out and take a stand on the issues."

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Mark Spitz, who swam to a record seven gold medals at the 1972 Olympics, Tuesday signed a formal contract agreement with the William Morris Agency to handle his potential show business career.

The agency was the same firm that lined up the first "Tarzan" picture for Olympic swim star Johnny Weismuller. But Spitz' attorney, Garth Scallon, said Spitz didn't want to become another Tarzan. "He doesn't ever intend to play the part of an illiterate man," Scallon said.

SARNIA, Ont. — An unemployed Sarnia high school teacher who is fighting his dismissal will receive city welfare payments of $595 a month.

Joseph Thompson, 54, father of 11, has also applied for unemployment insurance.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission has disqualified him from receiving two weeks of benefits that would otherwise have been payable, ruling that he was unemployed because of his own conduct.

SAN DIEGO — Charles R. Forgetsnothing, who forgot to appear for a court hearing last Dec. 8, was sentenced to six months in jail Tuesday on his no contest pleas to a second-degree robbery.

Superior Court Judge Charles Froehlich Jr. also granted the 21-year-old camp Pendleton marine credit for 66 days he already had spent in jail, recommended his custody be at an honor camp and placed him on three years' probation.

Forgetsnothing was accused originally in an incident involving a Yellow Cab driver Oct. 3. His readiness conference was set for Dec. 8 but he did not appear. When arrested later, he said he forgot to go to court.

LONDON — Chang Tzu-Tai, 35, an architect from Taiwan, was ordered held in custody for another week Tuesday on a request for extradition to the United States.

Chang was convicted of conspiracy to assassinate Taiwanese Prime Minister Chiang Ching-Kuo, Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's son. He jumped bail in New York and fled to Sweden. He was being extradited from there when he fell ill and was taken off an airliner here.

TORONTO — Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier said Tuesday night that ethnic community organizations involved in citizenship promotion projects can expect federal grants.

"The ethnic organizations are in a better position than the government to promote citizenship," said Pelletier, in presenting a cheque for $15,000 to the Federation of Italian Associations and Clubs.

OTTAWA — Gloria Grosvenor-Oftedal, 54, granddaughter of telephone inventor Alexander Graham Bell and wife of Torfinn Oftedal, Norwegian ambassador to Canada, died Tuesday night in Baddeck, N.S.

The Norwegian embassy said today Mrs. Grosvenor Oftedal had been suffering from cancer for about a year. She had been in Baddeck since July.

BRANDT BLASTS WAY TO NOVEMBER ELECTION

BONN (AP) — West German Chancellor Willy Brandt asked today for a vote of confidence he expects to lose, in a manoeuvre to blast open a four-month parliamentary deadlock and clear the way for elections in November.

His government lacks the majority to survive the vote when it takes place Friday. And he will make doubly sure of defeat by ordering members of his cabinet to abstain from voting.

Barring unforeseen complications, the Social Democratic chancellor then will ask President Gustav Heinemann to dissolve Parliament next week and call elections Nov. 19, nearly a year before the originally scheduled autumn 1973 date.

Brandt's manoeuvre, a constitutional device never before used in the Dundestag's 23-year history, provides a legal cure for the paralysis that has gripped the Bundestag since April.

Defection of several of Brandt's supporters robbed him of his ruling majority and left both sides of the 496-vote Bundestag unable to muster more than 248 votes each.

The opposition Christian Democrats indicated they would attack Brandt's record during debate on the confidence motion, giving a preview of an election campaign observers predicted would be one of West Germany's bitterest and closest.

Triumph for Met In New Carmen

NEW YORK (AP) — The Metropolitan Opera's new Carmen, seen Tuesday on the season's opening night, looked like a complete triumph, one of the best new productions at the Met in years.

The ideas for the Carmen are at least partly those of Goeran Gentele, the Metropolitan general manager who died in an automobile accident in July, only 18 days after taking his new job.

Gentele had decided to do the stage direction of Carmen himself and left detailed notes which have been followed and improvised on by director Bodo Igesz.

Before the opening curtain, the Met's board chairman, Lowell Wadmond, called the evening a tribute to Gentele.

Marilyn Horne in the title role is one of today's truly important voices, completely in command. James McCracken as Don Jose is usually heard in more dramatic roles calling for a heavier tenor voice. However, he has lightened his voice for Don Jose and also is a creditable partner for Miss Horne.

Neither of those two singers is strong in acting ability. However, it is obvious that both have been carefully directed and the direction carries the day.

Leonard Bernstein conducted the orchestra.

Adraina Maliponte as Micaela has a sweet but strong soprano voice and she makes her role direct and self-sufficient rather than the usually shy peasant girl. Tom Krause makes a good appearance as Escamillo, but his voice sounded somewhat mushy. Donald Gramm was a strong voice as Zuniga.

The sets and lighting were designed by Josef Svoboda.

Dumping Still Legal

Slegg Forest Products is operating within the law although it is dumping bark and sawdust in Cowichan Bay without a permit, a spokesman for the Pollution Control Branch says.

James McCrossan, information officer for the PCB, said that Slegg has registered with the branch as required.

Restrictions on the dumping into the bay will be spelled out when the PCB issues a permit, he said.

Slegg has applied for the permit but it has not yet been processed.

McCrossan said it was not possible to forecast how soon the permit might be issued.

A controversy arose when North Cowichan Mayor Gery Smith told his council the waste was being dumped into Cowichan Bay before a permit was finally approved.

When the company registered with the PCB it said it intended to dump 80 per cent bark, 20 per cent sawdust over about 25 acres five days a week to reclaim property in Cowichan Bay.

When completed, the mill waste will be covered with 24 inches of gravel.

Council sent a letter of protest to the PCB for allowing the company to proceed before the permit is processed.

McCrossan said it is part of the regular procedure for the PCB to allow companies to proceed after they register their plans and the PCB was carrying out extensive studies before the permit is granted.

BITING BATS MAY BE RABID

DUNCAN — Parents should warn their children against handling bats seen lying on the ground because they may have rabies.

Dr. Peter Reynolds, director of the Central Vancouver Island Health Unit, who issued the warning, said that within the past two weeks two rabid bats have been discovered in the area.

Any person bitten by a bat should seek medical attention.

'Fish' Is Spawning Ground For Help and Friendship

DUNCAN — The main aim of Fish, a newly formed organization here, is "to bring people together," says spokesman Jacquie Robson.

Mrs. Robson said Fish was formed in the spring to provide services which established organizations are not capable of supplying or which require a degree of personal attention. Services such as babysitting while a mother rushes an injured child to hospital, or supplying emergency accommodation to a youngster with no relatives in the area.

More than 200 persons have benefitted from the organization since its inception.

Mrs. Robson said the group, which has over 80 volunteers but needs more, derived its name from the ancient symbol of Christ which earl Christians scratched on the wall of Roman catacombs. Fish is an international organization which is spontaneously springing up in communities throughout North America and Europe.

Community response has been especially good, Mrs. Robson feels.

"Fish serves as a liaison between established organizations and has received much support from the churches," she said.

"We are trying to knit the community closer together so that eventually Fish won't be needed."

Mrs. Robson noted that "in the olden days people didn't need an organization to help one another. When something needed doing everyone would just pitch in and do it."

Police Hunt Hot Truck, Hotter Cargo

A three-ton truck containing sulphuric acid, which can cause fatal burns if improperly handled, was reported stolen from Star Oil Refinery, 1651 Island Highway, between midnight and 6 a.m. Tuesday.

Reg Yeeles, manager of the refinery, said the truck, similar to a dump truck, is used to transport oil sludge from the refinery. He said the bed of the truck is contaminated with sulphuric acid which is used in the re-refining of oil.

Yeeles said he arrived Tuesday morning to find the truck missing.

Colwood RCMP described the truck as a yellow 1958 Chevrolet.

Union Charges Dismissed

NANAIMO (CP) — Two charges against the Nanaimo local of the Carpenters' Union which arose out of last summer's province-wide construction strike and lockout — were dismissed Tuesday by provincial court judge Jack Caldwell.

The union was charged with failing to notify members to return to work following a back-to-work order issued under the B.C. Mediation Commission act. It was also charged that the union had authorized an illegal strike.

The charges were laid following police raids on the offices of various union locals throughout the province on June 12.

Judge Caldwell Tuesday refused a Crown request for an adjournment to November. He noted the crown could lay new charges if it wished and then dismissed the charges when the Crown was not prepared to proceed.

Auto Victim Inquest Set

An inquest into the death of a 24-year-old man, killed in an automobile accident on Sooke Road Sept. 7, has been set for Sept. 21 by Sooke district Coroner Eugene Murphy.

Joseph William Storer, of 1015 Colville, died instantly when his vehicle collided head-on with a pick-up truck driven by William Alfred Neil, 57, of 242 Glenairlie. Neil suffered minor injuries.

Little Progress In Talks

Little progress was reported Tuesday in negotiations between movie projectionists and two major theatre chain companies in British Columbia.

"We don't seem to be making much progress," said A. E. McManus of Vancouver, just before entering an executive meeting of Local 348 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators.

Asked if any more negotiating meetings have been held, he said "in all probability we'll be meeting again."

Issues in the dispute have not been made public but 160 projectionists have voted 93 per cent for strike action if necessary against Odeon and Famous Players theatres.

A strike would affect all but three movie theatres in Greater Victoria.

Little Caplin Now a Cash Crop

By JAMES HUSSEY

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Once used by Newfoundland fishermen-farmers as bait and fertilizer, the small smelt-like caplin now is fished for human consumption.

Each June and July for centuries the little fish has turned up on the sand and gravel beaches of Newfoundland to spend the spawning season. By the middle or latter part of July they disappear, leaving millions dried and rotting on the beaches and tens of thousands stored by farmers and fishermen.

However, during the last two seasons quantities have been exported to Japan where the female of the species is considered a great delicacy.

An inshore caplin experiment was started last year in fishing communities on the southern shore of the Avalon Peninsula and in Trinity, Conception and Bonavista bays.

Small-boat fishermen were encouraged to take inshore caplin with technical assistance provided to fish-processing plants where facilities were set up to process caplin for the Japanese market.

During the 1971 season, 80,000 pounds of female caplin were processed for export, Japaness caplin traps were used in all locations and a Japanese technologist was retained to introduce cleaning, packaging and freezing methods.

TRACE SCHOOLS

Production figures for 1972 are not yet complete but processing was stepped up considerably along the southern shore of the Avalon Peninsula.

The appearance and disppearance of caplin was remained a minor mystery over the years.

Four commercial fishing vessels have explored extensively in an effort to develop a commercial deep-sea or offshore caplin industry on Canada's Atlantic Coast.

They have discovered large schools of mature and young fish off the east coast of the Avalon Peninsula, various sections of the Grand Banks and a large school almost entirely made up of mature fish on the southeastern Grand Banks.

One of the four vessels, the Foam V, a trawler operating from the Burin Peninsula, took 40 tons of the fish from the Grand Banks in a single net.

White Stuff In Alberta

EDMONTON (CP)— Get the scraper out, Ma, there's some white stuff on the car.

The white stuff was snow, which fell throughout the night in central and parts of northern Alberta.

It melted quickly on the roads although there was a build-up on grassy areas and, of course, it stuck to parked cars.

The weatherman said today the snow was "edging as far south as Calgary" and as far north as Slave Lake, about 150 miles north of Edmonton.

He said he didn't know how much had actually fallen, but there were three inches on the ground at Rocky Mountain House, two inches at Cold Lake and an inch at Red Deer, Coronation, Vermilion and Edmonton International Airport.

A vigorous low pressure area located near The Pas, Man., was responsible for the crummy weather, he added.

Overnight temperatures were generally in the low 30s with highs today expected in the mid - 40s. Strong winds, gusting to 30 miles an hour, made it seem that winter had really arrived.

Some snow flurries during the morning were expected to change to rain later in the day.

Airlines, buses and trains were running on schedule and traffic, while slowed somewhat, wasn't as tangled as is usual with the first snow, police said.

A saving grace for farmers was that the snow wasn't expected to stop harvesting operations.

Edmonton's first snow of the year occurred Sept. 5.

Changes Forecast

CALGARY (CP) — Many changes in the Alberta Workmen's Compensation Act are expected to be recommended to the legislature following public hearings, says Bert Hohol, labor and manpower minister.

Dr. Hohol, chairman of the select legislative committee of eight MLAs reviewing the act, declined to release details. He added, however, that it "was a sure bet" that a liberalization of the act, with higher pension maximums and minimums, improved appeal procedures and a heightened "humanization" of administration would be recommended.

Power Export Study

WINNIPEG (CP) — Following a four-month preliminary study of technical and economic feasibility, Manitoba Hydro and Northern States Power Co. have agreed on further studies of a one million kilowatt power export plan to the United States.

In a news release the publicly-owned Manitoba Hydro said results of preliminary studies indicated the possible benefits to both utilities justified the further investigation.

Wife Threatened

CALGARY (CP) — Ald. Bob Simpson said Tuesday threats have been made against his wife and she has been given police protection.

Police confirmed the protection but declined to reveal the reasons. Ald Simpson said threats to kill his wife have been made several times but wouldn't elaborate because a police investigation was in progress.

Control at Stake

WINNIPEG (CP) — School boards will lose local control to the provincial departments of education if they do not work out strategies to curb spiralling education costs, an Ontario education consultant said Tuesday.

W. J. McCordic, executive director of the Ontario Association of Education Administrative Officials, said school boards must work out strategy in areas of staffing, wage and salary negotiations to combat rising costs.

Retailers Responsible

EDMONTON (CP) — Retailers have responsibility to set their own standards for food quality and bacteria control, Dr. Michael Stiles, a food microbioligist at the University of Alberta, said Tuesday.

He told a group of retailers from Alberta, Northwest Territories and British Columbia that food store owners should not rely on government to set standards.

Murder Count Faces U.S. Resident

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal court judge has signed an order clearing the way for extradition of a Woods Cross, Utah, man to Canada where he faces murder charges.

Frank C. Gunnuscio, 26, is charged with murder in the July rape and killing of Shirley Johnston in Saskatoon, Sask.

The woman's partially clad body was found in her home July 26. Court records indicate she was strangled with her own clothing the night before.

Court records say Gunnuscio was arrested after extensive investigation by Canadian authorities.

Gunnuscio's defence has claimed he was elsewhere when the crime was committed.

Manipulation board teaches muscle control.

'When Blue Flashes, It's Too Noisy . . .'

A playroom full of electronic "toys" will be a star attraction Wednesday Sept. 27, when the new addition to the G. R. Pearkes Clinic officially opens.

The toys or, more scientifically, "multi-sensory equipment", costing $3,500, include a slide, a manipulation board, a sequence trainer and a loudness monitor.

Toys are all color coded in sequence. Red always means the number one. Some toys are also music coded. In these cases, red represents the first not of the C major scale.

For example, when a child stands on the first step of the slide, a red light lights up and the first note of the scale plays. Alternate steps flash grey and play sharps and flats.

Two or three children climbing the slide at the same time can produce some interesting chords.

The manipulation board is covered with bells, buzzers, horns, a telephone dial, pulleys, gears, switches and dials.

When a child dials the number one on the telephone, a red light flashes.

If he selects the correct key and turns it in a certain direction, lights flash and a buzzer sounds.

The 21 items on the board have all been designed to teach muscle control and co-ordination of hands and fingers.

The sequence trainer is really a talking book. When a child presses the first button on the top left corner of the panel, he hears the first sentence of a story. To hear more, he must press the next button in the sequence. Buttons are arranged to teach the correct eye movement from left to right and top to bottom needed for reading.

The loudness monitor measures the amount of noise in the room and indicates the degree by color code. Instead of screaming for quiet (and adding to the noise level, presumably), a teacher can simply point to the monitor when it begins to flash in the blue-violet shades that indicate a high noise level.

When the children quieten down, the colors retreat down the scale to red, the color code for the lowest level of sound.

Mrs. Margaret McClung, the clinic's administrator, says the equipment also helps the occupational, speech and physiotherapists in their work with handicapped children.

Miss Michelle Campbell, the occupational therapist, uses the manipulation board to teach functional hand positions, eye-hand co-ordination and pinch movements involving the thumb and various fingers.

"A lot of these children have their thumbs tucked into their palms all the time," Miss Campbell said.

Because of this, children have great difficulty using thumb and fingers together. Miss Campbell uses the board to teach such movements because "the children enjoy it more than straight exercises."

The new addition, which provides 7,500 square feet more space, contains three new kindergartens, a library and resource centre furnished by the Greater Victoria School Board, the new electronic play room, office space and a staff lounge.

One way glass in kindergarten walls will allow teachers and students to observe children without detection.

General G. R. Pearkes will open the new addition. The public is invited to attend and tour the new wing on Sept. 27 at 1:30 p.m.

Schools' Sexist Bias Probed

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto board of education is looking at its promotion procedures partly to find out why few women hold senior jobs in its ranks.

A special committee set up to study the problem is also considering sex bias in text books and in the standards applied by guidance counsellors.

The motion that started it was proposed last spring by a man, trustee Graham Scott.

No Distinction

He said in an interview: "I can't remember ever having an idea that women have certain roles and that men have others. I don't remember ever seeing a distinction in their abilities."

Mr. Scott has been a computer programmer, a high school mathematics teacher and now works with the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education.

"When I became a teacher, it was obvious there was some process working that prevented women from rising to the supervisory positions men had. The process also ruled out certain classes of men and men of certain political opinions.

"This was not entirely a discriminatory effort by a group of officials, but a social standard accepted by most people."

He says after he was elected trustee and first mentioned the subject, a year and half ago, he was told few women qualified or were willing to qualify for promotion.

He says he decided to test his convictions by checking the ratios of men to women at various levels.

He began with the best qualified teachers, those with equivalent experience, courses, certificates, and found the ratio two to one. At the next level, jobs such as department head, the ratio of men to women is four to one.

"At the next level, vice-principal, it goes to 14 to one.

And at that point the method of selecting people to go to principals' courses enters.

That's in the hands of the officials of the board, and you select your own kind, males and males like yourself. You tend to perpetuate your own kind.

That's the level at which the selection process becomes obscure.

"Take academic schools, for instance. There is no sex bias in who teaches mathematics or history, but the 28 senior positions are all filled by males.

Clearly Equal

"To me this was clearly an indication that there were processes in operation that limited possibilities for women."

He says his original motion was to establish promotion criteria that made opportunities equal for men and women and clearly showed them to be equal.

When that passed with a small majority, amendments were added to create the committee and include the study of texts books and guidance.

Mr. Scott says he hopes results are being felt now and will show in the spring.

"Typically the big volume of promotions is at the end of the school year, and we hope to have changes by then.

"We feel we have made it clear to the women in our employ that there will be developed criteria for promotion that will be objective, so they can plan their careers.

"I would also hope it has made the men a little happier, in that they will have clearer guidelines."

Debrett Airs Title Dispute

LONDON (UPI) — The editor of the British aristocracy's social register says that despite 36 years of official denial the Duchess of Windsor has — and has always had — a constitutional right to the title "Her Royal Highness."

Patrick Montague-Smith marshalled a chain of authoritative argument to support his contention in the preface to the 1972-73 edition of "Debretts Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage and Companionage."

The scarlet and gold-bound reference book, weighing more than seven pounds, is the who's who of British royalty, nobility and rank-and-file aristocracy.

"A wife, whether the illegitimate daughter of a milliner like the Duchess of Gloucester, sister-in-law of George III, or an emperor's daughter, like the Duchess of Edinburgh, daughter-in-law of Queen Victoria, takes her style from her husband," Montague-Smith wrote.

On this and other points he based a case which, if accepted, could reverse a decision of parliament and four decades of ostracism by the British royal family, according the title at last to the widow of the former King Edward VIII.

Edward, the Duke of Windsor, died in May with his wish to see his wife recognized as "Her Royal Highness" unfulfilled.

"I am just presenting the arguments," Montague-Smith said this week. "But there seems to be little reason why the duchess should not be called HRH."

Reading Block? —Try Listening

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — If Johnny can't read, maybe he should try listening.

A year long, U.S. federally-financed experiment indicates pre-school youngsters listening to individualized lessons tape-recorded by parents and other family members are getting a head start in learning to read.

The program, directed by the New Jersey department of education, was designed by a former teacher, Gregory Simms, and his wife, Patricia, when they noticed their children had reading problems and weren't making headway in school.

They designed lessons on their own to teach the children certain reading fundamentals, recorded them on tape cassettes, and then gave them to the children to work on at their own speed. It soon became a game.

After meeting with initial success, although on a small scale, "they tried it by the seat-of-the-pants method with other youngsters," said Dr. John Casey, who directed the program for the education department. "As far as I know it's never been done before," he said.

The education department received $250,000 grant from the Office of Child Development of the U.S. department of health, education and welfare and brought 250 students, aged three to five years, into the year-long program, which has just ended.

Two Children Is Your Lot

MONTREAL (CP) — No couple has the right to give birth to more than two children, says Dr. Robert Goodland, a McGill University ecology professor who is setting up a local branch of Zero Population Growth. Those who want more than two should adopt to avoid "overstraining the resources of the country in what essentially comes down to a question of selfishness."

Human Sexuality Weekend Topic

A human sexuality workshop, sponsored by the Victoria Family Planning Association, will be held Friday, Sept. 22 and Saturday Sept. 23 at Victoria High School.

Dr. G. Scott Wallace, MLA for Oak Bay, and Dr. C. J. G. Mackenzie of the University of British Columbia Health Sciences Centre will talk about human sexuality Friday at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium.

Saturday's all-day session begins at 10 a.m. with nine discussion leaders giving brief outlines of areas each will cover. Then discussion groups will be held, three at a time so everyone can attend at least three different groups.

Topics which will be discussed are sex education, venereal disease, genetic counselling, abortion, contraceptives, population, relationship counselling, responsible parenthood, and vasectomy.

The workshop is open to the public and free. Saturday, people can buy lunch at the school or bring their own.

BRAZIL TOPS 100 MILLION SOULS

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Brazil's population has hit 100 million, the government run National Housing Bank reports. Only China, India, Russia, the United States, Indonesia and Japan have more people.

Brazil's rate of growth slightly under three per cent a year, remains one of the highest in the world, although it is down somewhat from the 1950s. The growth is due mainly to advances in medicine. The government refuses to back birth control openly, but family planning is widely practised. The birth rate has been declining since 1900.

Mechanics 'Less Than Half Battle'

This is the last of two articles on educational television in Victoria schools.

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Once the Greater Victoria School Board has required the machinery of educational television—TV receivers, videotape recorders, cameras, and cable TV—it has fought less than half the battle.

Good educational programs to show on this machinery and teachers who know how to use ETV in the classroom are almost more important as far as making the idea work.

The Greater Victoria School Board aims to get programs in three ways.

First, it provides cameras so students can make their own TV programs. Second, when all schools are linked to cable TV, classes can watch "live" TV programs. Third, it is building up a library of videotapes in its central resource centre.

The school board began videotaping TV programs off the air last October and now has a library of more than 200 tapes, available to all schools.

Can Be Sued

But Colin Glover, director of curricular services for the school board, has to be careful what is taped or he can be sued for violating the Canadian Copyright Act. Walt Disney, National Film Board and Encyclopedia Britannica have told Glover they'll sue if he tapes any of their shows.

The CBC allows only its National Schools Broadcasts to be taped.

Soon Glover will have a new source of ETV programs. The British Columbia department of education is going to start producing educational TV programs itself, starting this month.

With a studio in the B.C. Institute of Technology in Burnaby, and a budget of $150,000, the Provincial Educational Media Centre (as it is called) hopes to produce 50 programs this year. They will be available free to school boards.

B. A. Black, the department's director of audio-visual services, says there are two reasons for deciding to get a department studio and television crew.

"One is the growth of these cable systems throughout the provinces which we see as a viable way of distributing television programs," Black said.

"The other was that there has been a growing interest in the production of television programs," he added.

Rather than have individual school boards start spending thousands of dollars setting up their own production studios, the department decided to set up one central studio. Programs it produces will be tied directly to the provincial curriculum.

Student-made programs are Glover's favorite use of ETV.

"That's the one area that I've been trying to develop as much as possible," he said. "We're trying to get students to express themselves in ways other than dull old composition."

Danger Seen

The danger of ETV is that school boards will often invest in expensive equipment and then find teachers don't use it.

"What's happened time and time again is that a bright shiny new thing comes into the school and after a few days it's forgotten," said Jeff Potter, chairman of the educational media section of the University of Victoria's education faculty.

Potter participated in a study done in Montreal a few years ago to find out how much educational TV equipment was used in schools. Utilization rate was found to be nine per cent.

"Utilization is very low," he said. "I think it's getting better, but it's taking a long time. Quite honestly, it's a real problem."

Glover also acknowledges the problem.

"It would be useless just throwing TV into the schools now," he said. "They (teachers) wouldn't know how to use it.

"It took us 10 years to teach them (teachers) how to use film," he added. The school board has been building up its film library for years and has at least one projector in each school.

Last year the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association got a federal Local Initiatives grant to employ a team of three teachers and three technicians to familiarize teachers with the television equipment and to make them aware of the educational possibilities of television.

The team spent part of its time instructing teachers and part producing videotapes.

The school board itself has held a number of workshops on ETV and plans to hold more.

Education students at the university get an opportunity to study educational media—television, film, and other visual aids—but only a minority actually take the course.

Accept Media

However, more than 50 per cent of the education students get some exposure to the uses of educational media in their years of study, said Potter. Today's education students, like the children they will teach, have grown up with films and television and accept them completely, he said.

"Once you present them with this concept of visual media," he said, "they're away like the wind."

China's Women Play Mean Basketball

elizabeth forbes

The national women's basketball team of the Peoples' Republic of China plays an excellent game and in the thinking of Victoria's Lyn Hagglund, "could easily be classed among the top five teams in the world."

As manager, Miss Hagglund (herself a former UVic basketball star) led Canada's national women's basketball team on a 21-day visit to the Chinese Republic in August.

This was immediately after a 20-day visit to Italy and Sicily where the team represented the Canadian Basketball Association in a 16-game tournament.

The Chinese invitation came through the country's Sports Federation after talks with Sports Canada and the external affairs department.

These talks, Lyn believes, will result in further invitations to top Canadian teams in other sports, within the next two years.

"We were just lucky the Chinese asked for a basketball team first."

Timing of the visit coincided with the recent Canadian Trade Fair in Peking. "So we travelled out and returned in chartered planes with fair officials," Miss Hagglund explains.

The team played first in Peking's 18,000 seat Capital Stadium during the trade fair.

The place was filled to capacity for each game. But "strangely" Lyn says, there was little or no shouting.

Fair Clapping

"Clapping is the way the Chinese people express approval. And they gave that sign of appreciation equally to their own team and to ours, even when we were winning."

Nearest they came to excitement was in watching Canadian referees.

As Lyn explains it, Chinese referees use the whistle with less force and their arm commands are far more restrained.

"The racous way our referees blew the whistle and their vigorous arm movements created a wave of talk around the stadium and seemed to interest spectators far more than the game."

After Peking came exhibitions in Canton and Shanghai. In all, six games were played. The Canadians won two and lost four.

Contrary to general belief, the Chinese girls were tall. They were also well trained. The team practises together regularly, all year around. When another national team is invited to visit and to play in the Chinese Republic, practise hours are increased.

Motto of the Chinese team (and Lyn believes of most sports in that country at present) is "friendship first, competition second." It's bannered and printed in stadiums and in many athletic stores and centres.

"Their main aim right now seems to centre around getting to know the rest of the world and having the rest of the world get to know them."

After each game coaches of both teams got together and through interpreters exchanged ideas and specialized knowledge.

Interpreters were also used to facilitate communication between the two teams.

"Although by the end of 21 days the girls were also becoming adept at making themselves understood through the sign-and-smile language."

As well as playing basketball, the Canadians attended banquets, toured museums, saw the Ming tombs (rediscovered in 1965) and the Great Wall of China, visited schools, communes and ivory and jade factories.

On the tours, each Canadian girl was taken in charge by a Chinese player as "a special person" for that particular day.

Baggy Trousers

The Chinese girls never appeared in anything but their baggy trousers and white shirt blouses. Not once, however, did they register either envy or interest in the natty sports outfits of the Canadians.

"They appeared to be satisfied with their lives and extremely proud of their country," Lynn said.

On Friday in this column I'll tell you a little of Miss Hagglund's impressions of the schools and the communes and of the 15-course banquets she attended during the tour.

Birth Defects Linked To Incestuous Matings

WASHINGTON (WSN) — A Czechoslovakian scientist has confirmed what geneticists have long suspected and the public has generally believed: Children born of incestuous matings are at greater risk of early death and birth defects than children whose parents are not blood relatives.

Dr. Eva Seemannova of the Institute of Child Development Research in Prague followed the progress of 124 children who were the products of inbreeding and compared it to that of 136 children born to the same mothers, but unrelated fathers.

Death and birth defects proved to be 10 times more common in the incestuous group — this although all the parents in the study were healthy and of normal intelligence.

According to a report in the current issue of Medical Tribune, a weekly newspaper for physicians, only three of the children in the nonincestuous group who survived for a year had birth defects and all of these had a congenital dislocation of the hip which is easily repaired by surgery.

Furthermore, just three of these infants died before their first birthdays — one of prematurity, one of hydrocephalus and one of pneumonia.

By contrast in the incestuous group, two were stillborn and four died as newborns from prematurity or malformations. And of 110 who attained the age of three, 21 were born with single or multiple deformities and 10 suffered from oligaphrenia, the hereditary lack of an enzyme which renders the body incapable of digesting an important component of protein.

Without special dietary treatment, phenyketonuria, as this disorder also is known, leads to mental retardation. And even rigorous adherence to the diet does not always succeed.

In the incestuous group, there were 67 boys, 56 girls and one child of indeterminate sex with malformed external genitals. Most of the children were born to father-daughter unions, but 56 were the result of brother-sister unions and one was the result of a union between mother and son.

Seemannova's study is believed to be the largest and most thorough of its kind.

Grits Eye Women

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal party has created a National Committee on the Woman Voter which will be charged with telling the public and Liberal federal election candidates of the government's awareness of the role of women.

The committee is headed by Marie C. Gibeault, president of the Women's Liberal Federation of Canada. She was chairman of the prime minister's study group on the status of women.

The party announced that the objectives of the committee will be:

Documentation for candidates of the "rapid change in women's awareness" since the 1968 election; Production of campaign literature; Preparation of a radio ad; Assembling a team of public speakers available to speak anywhere at the request of constituency associations.

Crock of Cookies for Lunch

By MARY MOORE

Six and a half dozen cookies in the crock will go a long way toward helping you pack those daily lunches.

Our testing program is so heavy this month that Maureen took the recipe and ingredients home with her to make up in the evening and brought me samples. Here is a good new cookie for your brood.

ORANGE PEANUT COOKIES
(6½ dozen 2½-inch cookies)

¾ c. margarine or butter (Room temperature).
1/3 c. peanut butter
1½ c. brown sugar, packed
1 egg
1 tsp. vanilla
2 c. unsifted cake and pastry flour
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. baking powder
Grated rind and juice 1 medium orange
1 c. quick-cooking rolled oats
¼ c. salted peanuts, chopped

In large beater bowl, cream together margarine or butter and peanut butter. Add brown sugar and beat until fluffy. Beat in egg and vanilla well. Grate rind and add to creamed mixture.

Into sifter measure flour, salt, baking soda and baking powder. Sift flour mixture over creamed mixture adding alternately with orange juice. Blend thoroughly. Beat in rolled oats and peanuts. Chill cookie dough in refrigerator 15 minutes while you pre-heat oven to 375 degrees F. Drop batter by teaspoonfuls about 1½" apart onto lightly greased cookie sheets and bake for about 10 minutes. Watch them like a hawk.

Remove from cookie sheets with metal lifter and cool on wire rack.

Sweet Potato Is Better

dear abby

So Who's Fooling?

DEAR ABBY: Last weekend I was falsely accused of having an affair with the wife of a fellow worker. This fellow telephoned me at 7 a.m. and informed me that he had some good news and some bad news. The bad news was that I wouldn't be able to spend the weekend with his wife. The good news was that instead of doing me physical harm for having fooled around with his wife (which I never did), he had thrown a brick through the windshield of my automobile!

I thought it was all a joke. Now comes the problem: Later that morning, I found a $100 cheque in my car and a note from this fellow stating, "After contemplating my rash behavior, I realized how foolishly I behaved, so this $100 will cover the damages to your car."

I replaced the windshield, which amounted to $30. What should I do with the remaining $70?—On the Level.

DEAR ON: Buy yourself a bulletproof vest. You never know what a nut like that will do next.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were invited to our nephew's high school graduation party, and when we arrived we were told our nephew had left town that morning to go on a vacation to the seashore. His mother said he had made plans to go three days before the party. We (and all the others at the party) were disappointed to come to a party and find the guest of honor wasn't even there.

We had brought a nice cheque which we wanted to hand to our nephew in person, but we left it with his mother instead. (The boy has been back for five weeks and we still haven't had an acknowledgment for our cheque.)

I asked the mother why she didn't cancel the party when she knew three days in advance that her son wouldn't be home, and she said, "It's proper to have a party to honor our son's graduation whether he's here or not."

We've never heard of such a thing. Was this proper?—Disappointed Relatives,

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: About as "proper" as scheduling a wedding without a bride and groom. In any case, there is no excuse for is not having acknowledged your gift.

DEAR ABBY: I am being married in December and I have my wedding all planned out to the smallest detail because I want it to be perfect.

The problem is this: the guy I am marrying wears braces on his teeth. We thought he would have them off in time for the wedding, but he found out yesterday that he will have to wear them for another five or six months! He's 20, and a junior in college (so am I) and it's bad enough that he has to wear braces at his age, but when I think of the wedding pictures and him with braces, I could cry.

Should I insist that he have them taken off for the wedding? I know it could be done, but his dentist isn't crazy about the idea. Please advise me.—Blue Bride.

DEAR BRIDE: Don't mention his braces. I'm sure they aren't as conspicuous to others as they are to you.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thurs., Sept. 21, 1972
BY SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What you say and write could be misinterpreted. Realize this and strive to make meanings crystal clear. Gemini and Virgo individuals could figure prominently. Some persons tend to relate tall stories. Be skeptical!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Work out minor problem with co-operation of family member. Some friends may not be thinking too clearly in money area. Be cautious. Don't fall for get-rich-quick scheme. Separate fact from fancy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Review contracts, special agreements. Your goals can be clarified if you are realistic. Otherwise, you could be sidetracked. Obtain valid hint from Aries message. One in authority will do an about-face.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Practical efforts succeed. You are given more responsibility. But you also have chance for greater rewards. Nothing occurs halfway for you. Now it must be all or nothing. Open lines of communication.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You find out where you stand with special person. Accept situation as it really exists. Accent is on legal papers, ensuring future security. Think of your own needs. You can do this without being selfish.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stress originality, fresh approach. Leo could be involved in new enterprise. Let past go; don't brood about what could have been. Legal document requires special attention. Let mate, partner have chance to express view.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't force issues. Tread lightly. Be flexible. Aquarian could provide some answers. Key is to listen and evaluate. You don't have to rush. Relative will change mind about property matter.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Obtain hint from Libra message. Stress versatility. Let others see that you can do more than one thing. Means display knowledge, varied interests. Sense of humor now proves valuable asset.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Some restrictions actually serve your interests. Know it and respond accordingly. Romantic impulse is featured. But also give logic equal time. Think before taking definite action. You'll be happier as result.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Short journeys, messages, ideas which need more development—these are featured. Take care to avoid accidents due to carelessness. Relatives, neighbors do plenty of talking, but may not be saying much.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Co-operate with Libra. By giving now you also will receive. Message will be clarified. Protect assets. Take inventory. Count your change. Don't put temptation in path of weak friend, associate. Avoid wishful thinking.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain hint from Aquarius message. Be wary of self-deception. Perfect techniques. Get rid of wasteful procedures. Speak up for rights. Don't be afraid of new assignment, challenge. You're going to win!

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are able to express yourself in manner which intrigues. You have delightful sense of humor. You also tend to scatter your forces. In November, you may change residence. Most certainly, there will be change in home atmosphere. Taurus and Libra persons are likely to be involved.

Phoney Crash Scheme Alleged

MONTREAL (CP) — Insurance firms have been defrauded of about $1 million in recent years through arranged car collision in the Montreal area involving rented cars, police said Tuesday.

Lieut. Leo Talbot, head of the Montreal police commercial fraud section, said in an interview fraud squad investigators are "only beginning to see the light" but are trying to gather enough evidence to break up what they believe is an organized ring of fraud artists.

A closed-door court inquiry began Monday to study police findings and to determine whether there is enough evidence to lay charges.

Persons convicted of taking part in the phoney accident operation could be imprisoned for up to 10 years for fraud and 14 years for perjury.

Charles Moreau, manager of the Insurance Bureau of Canada, said he knew staged accidents happened in Montreal but doubted an organized ring was involved. The $1 million estimate was an exaggeration, he said.

Notaries Blueprint Client Protection

KELOWNA (CP) — Several resolutions which would give greater protection to clients were passed Tuesday at the 15th annual convention of the British Columbia Society of Notaries Public.

More than 200 delegates voted to ask the provincial government to allow the society to raise its special indemnity fund to $150,000 from $100,000. The fund is used to reimburse those who have lost money through a notary's misappropriation or wrongful conversion of funds.

The society also passed a resolution asking the government to allow it to raise the individual limit of reinbursement to $10,000 from $5,000.

Resolutions asking for mandatory liability insurance coverage and for members to be bonded were also passed by the convention.

William Brendon of Vancouver was re-elected president of the society, while John Reed of Abbotsford was elected vice-president. Six new directors were also chosen: Bill Baker of Kelowna, Dennis Humphries of Victoria, Roy Bishop, Vernon Hargreaves, Frank McDonald and Edward Russell, all of Vancouver.

Sanctuary Eyed

BURNABY (CP) — Municipal council has approved in principle a motion to develop Burnaby Lake into a wildlife sanctuary. Ald. Doreen Lawson, who proposed the facility, said Burnaby has a unique opportunity to develop the sanctuary. She said the lake and surrounding park had defied commercial development because the peat in some places is 80 feet deep and soggy and the water is "coffee-colored and brackish-looking." Council called for a report into the proposal.

Curtis Suspects Federal Aid

Timing of a federal proposal to increase aid to municipal sewerage projects makes Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis "very suspicious, coming weeks before a federal election."

"I'll believe it when I see it," was his summation of the proposal which Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford described in Calgary Tuesday.

"If the federal government is considering additional financial assistance, that would be terrific," said Curtis, who is chairman of the Capital Regional District board, and acting chairman of B.C. Municipal Finance Authority, both of which are involved in sewerage programs.

"But he (Basford) indicates the program would not be brought in until late 1973 or early 1974. The timing is strange . . ." Curtis said.

He found it curious that Basford made no such announcement when he had the opportunity to speak to some 700 municipal representatives at the Union of B.C. Municipalities annual meeting which he attended in Vancouver last week.

Curtis said that if money is to be made available for sewerage programs, he did not consider it further intrusion of the federal government into local jurisdiction, and would be "very, very pleased."

"We hear so many formulae given as the answer to a municipality's prayer," Curtis commented. But "when you sort down through the chaff" they may turn out not so good.

Basford told a news conference that federal proposals are being prepared during examination of a report to Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. from Montreal engineer George Seaden.

These proposals will be discussed with the provinces during the next year, he said.

The Seaden report looked at existing provisions under the National Housing Act and called for a "new effective federal policy for funding municipal sewage disposal projects."

It said "the threat posed to national survival from indiscriminate and uncontrolled waste disposal is of national importance and is therefore of concern to the federal government."

The report's main conclusion is that not enough money is available to municipal governments to deal with municipal sewage problems.

"We are conscious of the problem," Basford said.

If You Can't Vote, You Can't Run

By TOM MITCHELL

OTTAWA (CP) — The rule of thumb is that if you can vote in a federal election, you probably can be a candidate.

The reverse of it is a sure thing — if you can't vote, you can't run.

For the next federal election, the voting age, and thus the qualifying age for candidates, has been dropped to 18 years from 21 under a revised Canada Elections Act passed by Parliament in 1970.

If you are of age, a Canadian citizen and lived in Canada when the election was called, you meet the general qualifications. So do British subjects who have not become Canadian citizens but were eligible to vote at the last federal election in 1968, a privilege that is being eliminated by 1975 under the revised act.

But the would-be occupant of one of the 264 House of Commons seats faces a few more restrictions than are set for the people who vote for him.

SOME ARE BARRED

A member of the regular armed forces in peacetime cannot be a candidate, for example. Neither can sitting members of provincial legislatures or the councils in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, anyone holding contracts with the federal government under which he is paid out of public funds, sheriffs, clerks of the peace, Crown attorneys and certain federal public servants appointed by the Crown or the government.

Holding of government annuities or debentures is not considered a contract for the purpose of these restrictions.

Although barred from candidacy, all these people have the vote. Resignation from a prohibited position of course clears the way for such persons to run.

A nomination as candidate must be filed with a returning officer by the deadline — 2 p.m. local standard time on the 21st day before the election in most ridings, exactly a week earlier in 21 of the country's large ridings with scattered populations.

MUST HAVE WITNESS

With the nomination a candidate must include signatures of 25 voters in his riding and a witness must accompany him to swear they are the signatures of qualified voters.

A $200 deposit in cash or certified cheque also is required as a deterrent to the frivolous. The returning officer sends it to the federal treasury. If the candidate wins or gets half as many votes as the winner the deposit is returned. Otherwise it is forfeit.

A candidate's personal spending, for hotel and travel expenses for example, is limited by law to $2,000.

For the handling of all other election funds he must name an official agent.

While a candidate can be 18 years old his agent might have to be 21. The law says the agent must be "capable of entering into contracts" in whatever province the riding is located. Some provinces have reduced this age to 18 but in others it still is 21.

A candidate may withdraw his or her nomination up to 8 a.m. local standard time on the 18th day before voting day by filing, in person, a declaration before the returning officer.

If ballots have not been printed yet, the name is left off. If they have, notice of withdrawal is posted in every polling place in the riding and each voter is told of the withdrawal in getting a ballot.

The $200 deposit is forfeit in any withdrawal.

Persons who do not vote, and thus cannot be candidates, are the chief electoral officer and assistant, returning officers in each riding who vote only in case of a tie, federally-appointed judges, prisoners in penal institutions, persons restrained of liberty or deprived of management of their property because of mental illness and persons disqualified from voting because of corrupt or illegal electoral practices.

Conviction of any corrupt practice prohibits a person qualifying as a candidate for seven years. A five-year ban is imposed on those found guilty of illegal practices.

Cabinet Travels

EDMONTON (CP) — The provincial cabinet will hold a regular meeting in Grande Prairie Oct. 17.

An announcement from the premier's office today said cabinet members will visit several communities in the Peace River area in conjunction with the visit. The cabinet will travel in four groups, starting Oct. 16. Premier Peter Lougheed will travel separately.

Fuzzy-Minded Nationalism Hit by Artist

By VICTOR STANTON

TORONTO (CP) — You don't converse with anyone involved in the Canadian music industry for long before the topic of Canadian-content regulations comes up.

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission brought down rulings in 1971 requiring 30 per cent air play of Canadian-content music on AM stations.

The rulings are not enforced as a law, since they do not arise from any actual legislation, but are there as a guideline the CRTC wishes the stations to follow.

Talking to Canadian recording artists, you come to anticipate a hearty endorsement of CRTC aims and its methods to achieve them.

So you're a little surprised when a native singer like Ian Tyson calls the rulings "a lot of nonsense."

The singer, who has his own television show and is best known in the folk and country fields, doesn't stop there.

"I think it's featherbedding. It's like putting a fireman on a diesel locomotive.

"Talk about building a cocoon around an industry and just socializing it to death, that's what's going to happen."

He said he didn't see any need to require radio stations to program music simply because it was written or performed by a Canadian or recorded in this country.

"If it's not good enough, it shouldn't be played. The good Canadian stuff is played and has been played. Prior to his television show, he was most widely heard singing with his wife, Sylvia. First hit up here was back in about '64, and in the periods where we haven't had a hit in Canada, it's because we didn't have anything that was commercial enough to be played."

'DON'T WANT TO HEAR'

He said he felt the rulings have led to stations playing inferior material, including songs of his own "that I don't want to hear on the air."

"They the rulings don't make up for any lack of imagination on a dumb jockey's part. In a lot of Canada, these guys disc jockeys are so unimaginative and spend so little time researching what is happening in the Canadian recording industry that 30 per cent seems to come out as Gord Lightfoot and Anne Murray."

The singer doesn't knock nationalism, however, as evidenced this summer by his participation as a promoter and judge of a Canadian songwriting contest sponsored by a brewery.

But nationalism, he maintained, was happening without the CRTC.

"I think '67 was the big turning point. That was the birth of all this nationalism."

He said the CRTC seemed more oriented towards developing an industry for single records than in nurturing Canadian music.

"There's a whole generation of super-successful album artists who couldn't care less if they get any AM play.

"If they were going to work on the Canadian music industry in general, the first thing they should have done was institutionalize the Centennial tours of 1967.

ALL MADE MONEY

"These tours went all over Canada. We played in places where they had never seen any live entertainment before of any kind. Thefederal government underwrote the whole thing, but there wasn't one show we did that we didn't make money.

"The young people I met on those tours were seeing there really was such a thing as a Canadian performer who actually made a living entertaining people.

"I think that live entertainment creates a tradition that cannot be created as solidly and with as much depth in any other form."

The singer suggested the government should have set up recording studios right across the country.

He allowed that the CRTC "played a role" in growth of the recording industry in such places as Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver over the last two years, but "why not put a 16-track recording studio in Brandon, Man?"

"Why do the kids in Brandon, Man., have to travel all the way to Nashville or Toronto to make a record?"

He said English-Canadians could learn a lot from their French-speaking counterparts.

"They've had their industry there because the people have supported it. They've never needed any regulations."

Aid Sought

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer plans to seek more assistance for the integrated forestry project at The Pas when he confers with a cabinet minister in Ottawa Thursday.

An aide to the premier said the talks, with Regional Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand, may include a possible extension of the department's special area program throughout Northern Manitoba.

Single phase electric motor lets you send your tractor out to pasture. The Power-Take-Off on your tractor makes it a highly mobile power source. But it's also an expensive power source. Fuel costs are about 75¢ per hour to operate a tractor compared to about 37¢ for electricity for a 30 hp motor. Besides the wear and tear on your tractor the PTO ties it up while it could be doing other farm work.

With a single phase electric motor you can send your tractor back to work. Single phase motors are excellent for driving irrigation and other pumps, silage blowers, crop dryers, feed processing equipment, in fact any equipment that doesn't require a high starting torque. They are inexpensive to operate, quiet and fumeless and can be adapted to automatic controls. Single phase electric motors are available up to 50 hp. Before you buy be sure to apply for clearance from B.C. Hydro to ensure that our distribution lines can handle the larger motor.

Saanich Council Adopts Noise Bylaw; Alderman Wonders About 'False Hope'

A draft of Saanich's noise control bylaw was adopted without change by council Tuesday although one alderman wondered if it was giving the public "false hope."

The recommendation was made by council's legislative committee. Chairman Ald. Alan Newberry and Ald. Ed Lum opposed it and Aldermen Fred Severson, William Noel and Leslie Passmore voted affirmatively.

Committee was told by solicitor Darrall S. Collins who drafted the bylaw, that it is presented in a general form that could make enforcement difficult without corroborating opinions regarding alleged violations.

He said council had three options:

—Forget about a noise bylaw and rely on private prosecutions by way of civil courts and restraining orders.

—Adopt a bylaw such as the draft with no guarantees as to its effectiveness.

—Draft an elaborate bylaw filled with technical requirements for sound measurement or other criteria.

But the latter would not make any difference to enforcement, Collins said.

"The more elaborate it is, the more difficult to enforce," he said, giving experience in Ottawa as an example. There could be exceptions, however.

"If it's the type of noise that bothers somebody and doesn't bother anybody else, I think citizens should handle complaints themselves. A noise bylaw is one that is very difficult to enforce," Collins said.

"We have given the public no answer," Ald. Severson said.

But Ald. Newberry wondered whether by drafting the bylaw the committee had "given the public false hope." He implied the draft is an answer to the complaints of many citizens who oppose such noise-making things as power mowers, hi-fi sets on patios, minibikes and loud cars.

"If you are going to pass a simple bylaw, then this is the bylaw we would recommend," the solicitor said.

He said in certain circumstances, there could be successful prosecutions.

Discussion started with reference to letters from Gordon Duncan, 4870 Townsend, who sought "the earliest possible implementation of a noise bylaw in Saanich;" and Mrs. K. G. Fawcett, 1833 Laval, who defended boys who have harmless fun with cars and minibikes, albeit noisy, and others seeking surcease.

"I don't know how you are going to win on these things," Newberry commented, noting some for and some against the suppression of noise.

"What's unnecessary noise?" he asked.

Noel said the bylaw would not be "worth the paper it's written on" without something "tangible" written in.

Collins thought the police would have to have more than one complaint to make a charge adhere, referring to the use of "neighborhood" in the bylaw.

There could be private prosecutions, he said, but with an aggravated complaint police may press a public prosecution.

For repetitious noise he suggested the use of a restraining order as being most effective.

Lum precicted police will be swamped with complaints if the bylaw is approved.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

TEACHERS 'GOOF OFF', REPORT SHOWS

OTTAWA (CP) — Sickness is a matter of timing, or so it seems among Carleton separate school teachers.

A report on teacher absenteeism, prepared for the Carleton separate school board, found that 90 per cent of absences were "one-day illnesses" that occurred most frequently on Fridays or Mondays before or after statutory holidays.

The finding, suggested one board member, tends to indicate that teachers are "goofing off."

Police Fight Parole

By DOUG SMALL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police has taken a tough line against liberalization of the parole system, arguing that parole is a privilege rather than a right and that society's rights must prevail over those of an individual.

In a brief to the Senate legal affairs committee, adjourned until Parliament resumes later this fall, the association said practical, realistic changes in parole law could only be made after consultation with them and others "in the field."

"Extreme care must be exercised in evaluating what is humanitarianism for one individual in the light of society in general. . . . It should never be forgotten that democracy is not the right of the individual but the right of society as such."

The brief is one of about 95 already submitted to the committee and a Senate spokesman said another 15 or 20 are expected before the committee makes its report on the parole system. The police chiefs' brief will be presented to the committee when it resumes later this year.

STRICT STANCE

The association makes a number of recommendations concerning the parole system including one that would eliminate "any and all privileges of subsequent parole" to a convict breaking out of jail.

It suggests that "forceful" education efforts be made by authorities and such groups as the John Howard Society to "establish means whereby it would be virtually impossible for a parolee to go wrong."

"All too often . . . the parolee remembers 'easy street' or the bad side of society and little effort is made to 'brainwash' reality into him."

The police chiefs also asked for closer co-operation between parole authorities and policemen, saying that a prisoner "in applying for parole will place himself in the best possible light and is likely to suppress certain of the facts surrounding the commission of the offence in the first instance."

THE WHIP AGAIN

The association also recommended that the committee consider the re-introduction of corporal punishment—whipping and the like—which was banned in recent amendments to the Criminal Code. Such punishment should be controlled by some unnamed other body rather than by the parole board, the association said.

The board's "true role" was determining whether or not a convict is eligible for parole, not whether a sentence should be modified.

The association said particular care should be taken to impress parolees that "parole is a privilege and that they must abide by the rules laid down."

The police chiefs recommended that such things as temporary leaves, day parole and other absences from prison be lumped together under the Parole Act and Penitentiary Act to avoid confusion.

Such temporary leaves should be made only to allow convicts to take courses they can't take in jail and only where it is possible to provide "adequate control" of the convict.

Burning Ban Coming?

A hint of proposed new refuse burning bans in Saanich was given at a meeting of council's fire committee Tuesday.

Chairman Ald. William Noel said at the next committee meeting there would be recommendations for the banning of Sunday trash burning and restriction of burning on other days to between sunrise and noon.

If adopted, the regulations could put the fat in the fire for the freedom-loving municipality where backyard burning has been considered a natural right.

Ald. Fred Severson said there was no way he could get rid of all his garden waste such as fallen leaves without burning.

Ald. Alan Newberry said he strongly opposed any ban on Sunday burning and could not see why other days should be restricted. Chairman Noel said he favored Sunday burning, too. But for those who took their rest on sundeck and patio that day, an adjoining backyard smudge fire could be disturbing.

The council and fire department have received many complaints about incinerator burning, some of it the result of neighborhood feuds.

A biological study of four major lakes and Colquitz River in Saanich was recommended Tuesday by council's parks and outdoors recreation committee as a joint University of Victoria Project.

Dr. Edwin Hagmeier, associate biology professor, said the department's time and space would be donated and an estimated $3,000 cost of profiding field and laboratory assistants, computer time and compilation of a report would be Saanich's share.

The original plan was to study all six lakes in the municipality, but parks administrator A. E. Richman suggested Colquitz be included at the expense of two of the smaller lakes, Maltby and Killarney. Those to be covered would include Beaver-Elk, Prospect, Blenkinsop and Swan.

"I think it would be a wise investment of $3,000," said Ald. Alan Newberry.

Chairman Ald. Ed Lum agreed: "Aside from recreation we would find out what is going on in these lakes."

Ald. William Noel was assured by Dr. Hagmeier that the work would include a report on algae and recommendations to deal with the problem at Swan Lake. Noel said the cause might be Growers' Winery.

In other business it was decided to refer a request for opening to the public a reserved part of Elk Lake beach to the regional district parks committee because the district is owner and Saanich merely the temporary custodian.

About 200 feet of beach has been reserved and fenced for the use of handicapped children and their families, with the Cerebral Palsy Association responsible for upkeep.

Saanich was asked to consider expanding the heavily-used public beach to include this reserved portion because few handicapped appeared to use it.

Ald. Leslie Passmore drew attention to protests made at the time the suggestion was first made in the early summer.

"I know it used, but perhaps not as much as it should be," said Lum. "Until we find an alternative we should maintain it," he said.

Passmore agreed, suggesting the time is appropriate to explore beach expansion by other means.

It is a good time to approach the provincial highways department to help undertake beach development north of Eagle Park at the south end of Elk Lake, Lum said. He said earlier this stretch of lakefront close to the rebuilt Patricia Bay Highway serves as a frame for the entrance to the city and should be improved.

Biologists To Examine River, Lakes In $3,000 Job

The committee was satisfied with the administrator's report on safety measures taken at Beaver-Elk beaches, even though at peak times on fine days the maximum of 10 lifeguards is not adequate according to Red Cross lifesaving standards.

Richman referred to lifesaving equipment, scuba gear, an inhalator hot-line and the cutting of underwater weeds in patrolled areas. Six new signs warning of swimming hazard outside the patrolled areas were installed this summer.

If further weedcutting is done outside these areas, then they would also need patrolling, he said. The lifeguard program costs $10,000 as is.

"I don't know how far you go in protecting people from themselves," said municipal administrator John Tribe.

More surveillance of speed boating and water skiing will be requested of police during the ski season at Prospect Lake.

Following complaints of speeders vs. fishermen, police studied the situation and concluded the bylaw restricting water skiing is fair to both parties. If there are infringements there should be boat patrols, it was suggested.

"Residents are just as close to police as their telephone and every one of those boats has a number on it," Noel said.

C. H. Maurice, 261 Eastlake, complained of summer parking on the road and control of public access to prospect Lake adjoining his property. He said trespassers use abusive language and park to obstruct driveway access.

The Maurices did not enjoy the "role of meanies" in confrontations with abusive persons, the letter said, pointing out the lack of proper access concentrates the problems at his doorstep and that additional accesses would disseminate them.

Richman said parking improvement could be done for about $1,000 which could qualify as a winter work project.

Improved access to Margaret Bay in Gordon Head could also be a winter work job, involving repairs to steps leading down the bank which had been damaged by past winter storms and closed off.

Solicitor Darrall S. Collins reported to finance committee some success had been achieved in the enforcement of building and zoning bylaws by the use of injuncition.

The traditional method of laying charges and getting convictions with fines had proven to be no remedy in many cases. But currently, as an example, Collins said a case is pending where an injunction has forced a property owner to cease using his dwelling for a purpose other than permitted by the zoning.

Time to Prepare Those Coldframes

By HILDA BEASTALL

On September days when a better-than-20-mile wind blows in from the Pacific, we find our thoughts reluctantly propelled towards readying the protective glass covers for the coldframe of lettuce and other winter salad greens.

Not that we expect to raise all our requirements these days, but it's good to have a supply of young lettuce plants, a couple of chive clumps, chervil and American Cress (Land Cress) under a little protection. These fresh green foods enliven those which must be bought.

American Cress is a particularly useful hardy salad green. It will grow without a coldframe. I first found a plant growing on the side of one of our massive compost heaps. Someone told me it made good eating and gave me the name.

We liked it enough to save some of the prolific seed and introduce it to others who had not heard of this "land" cress. The flavor is much-like watercress, a tangy sharpness which goes well with lettuce, tomatoes and eggs; or with quickly-steamed squash.

It might even do something for marrow if you use this as a cooked vegetable.

A half-dozen young plants will keep you going most of the winter. Using two or three of the oldest leaves from every plant at each picking encourages continuous production.

A glass cover over the frame is needed less as protection for the cress than for the other inhabitants of the frame. In fact, plants growing in the open will give a really plentiful gathering in all but the hardest frost. Then you'll be glad of the frame-protected plants.

To keep the glass cover anchored during gale-force winds, use either two-by-fours crosswise on the glass, one heavy beam from top to bottom, or large wooden turn-buttons on each of the four sides.

Don't take chances with the cover staying in place, even though it is a snug fit. There are few so frustrating discoveries on a busy morning as to find shattered glass of coldframe covers when the damage could have been prevented.

When not in use, stand the covers upright and tie, anchor, or wedge them safely against wind or any other destructive force.

The cover for the lettuce frame is needed only in the worst of weather — drenching rains or hard frosts — but then it means the difference between continuing the cropping through the winter or losing your little green delicacies to the weather.

As usual, planning now ensures the satisfaction of success later. Don't put off your coldframe preparations another day.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Generally speaking a defender does not underlead an ace against a suit contract, based on the appreciation that either dummy or declarer might possess a singleton king, which will win the trick. And subsequently, when the ace is led, it gets trumped. But there are times when the risk in underleading an ace is very slight, as, for example, when partner has bid the suit vigorously, indicating that in all probability he possesses the king.

The underlead of an ace is the theme of today's deal, which arose in the Vanderbilt Cup Championships held earlier this year.

East-West vulnerable. East deals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
2 ♡	Dbl.	Redbl.	3 ♣
Pass	Pass	4 ♡	4 NT
Pass	5 ◇	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♡.

The above was the bidding sequence when Mark Blumenthal, of Philadelphia, held the West cards, with Robert Lipsitz, of Arlington, Va., sitting East. East's two-heart opening bid was the "weak two bid," showing a six-or seven-card suit, within a hand containing 6-12 high-card points.

North's four-notrump call was a conventional bid, commanding South to bid his better minor suit. So South dutifully bid five diamonds.

At trick one, Blumenthal led his seven of hearts, underleading his ace in the almost certain knowledge that his partner, who had made a vulnerable two-heart opening bid, had the king of hearts. Upon winning the trick with his king, Lipsitz returned the queen of spades.

South covered the queen with the king, and West's ace won the trick. West returned a spade, and East made two more spade tricks. In time, West took his ace of clubs. Thus declarer went down three tricks, for a loss of 500 points. This was a good sacrifice against East's vulnerable four-heart contract, which would have netted East-West a score of 620.

When the deal was replayed, our "new" South also arrived at the sacrificial five-diamond contract, with East having bid hearts. West elected to open a trump, which declarer won, and gathered in the outstanding trumps. He then led the club king, West's ace winning.

West now underled his ace of hearts, East taking the trick with his king. Then came the shift to a spade, and the defenders collected three spade tricks, to hand declarer a 500-point set. Thus the result of the deal was a "stand-off."

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

9 IN MEMORIAM

Swallowing Foreign Objects

Every parent knows that small children have a tendency to put all kinds of objects into their mouths — and that there is the danger that the object, if it is small enough, will accidentally be swallowed. This type of accident happens many hundreds of times each year. Adults also can sometimes accidentally swallow a foreign object, as did the man I recently read about in Time magazine who swallowed the thermometer which a nurse had put in his mouth. Doctors watched with X-rays everything that happened to the thermometer. Actually, it passed slowly through his digestive tract until, after 19 days, it was passed.

Occasionally, when a person swallows something so big that it cannot very well get out through the digestive tract, an operation has to be performed. Also, sometimes a persons swallows something that sticks in the gullet or the upper inlet at the upper end of the stomach. When this happens, the patient should be taken to an expert who can pass a lighted tube down through the gullet and with a special instrument can grip the swallowed article and pull it out.

One of the common articles swallowed by small children is the safety pin. It takes an expert to get it out, especially when the pin is open. He has a special instrument which will enable him to close the pin and then it is easy to get it out.

Back around 1932, I built a big museum at the Mayo Clinic with that fine artist Dr. Arthur Bulbulians. We had a show case in which there were dozens of objects which had been removed from the gullets of children who had been brought to the Mayo Clinic.

Parents need not be too concerned if the object swallowed is small and round. If it was small enough to be swallowed, then it will probably go right through the bowels. But it is a good idea to go quickly to the emergency room of a hospital and report the accident.

OVERWEIGHT WOMEN AND SEX

In the past, many people have believed that overweight women are not very sexy, and some psychiatrists have held the theory that women become overweight in order to avoid sex. But in a study recently made by a team of Illinois researchers, Dr. William G. Shipman and Dr. Ronald A. Schwartz, the sexual drives of two sets of 15 couples were studied. It was found that 13 of the 15 overweight wives wanted sex more frequently than did the normal-weight wives. The two groups of 15 couples, one made up of normal-weight wives and the other made up of overweight wives, were chosen from volunteers who had been matched for age, educational level and years of marriage.

The researchers concluded that women who are overweight have not done so to avoid sexual relations, but that instead, the physiological process which makes them crave food is the same one that makes them crave sex.

MARINE DIVISION
Remember — our policy is to serve your needs — and do it to the best of our ability. Browse around, take a good look at the row upon row of boats — inboard and outboard — trailers — outboards (new and used) — even dinghies, brand new and otherwise.
Certainly we deal in motorcycles — and golf cars — and trailers — and brokerage etc., but we're just a dept. store trying to meet all your requirements in the recreational, leisure field — and we expect to expand further! In the last little while we have even added two wholesale distribution divisions!
We're not as perfect as we'd like to be, but we do try each and every day to be a bit better — and a nicer place for you to do business with.
Our staff is ever expanding and if we do find that an employee isn't doing his job — (which is just making you happy) whether it's service or sales, we make the necessary adjustments.
Pearson World of Pleasure Ltd. is probably the largest small boat dealer on the Island. There are literally dozens of boats, trailers and outboards — we think you'll be happy with the deal, the personnel and the service.
WE DO TRY HARDER!

BOSUN'S CHARTERS LIMITED
INTRODUCING
"DUTCH AUCTIONS"
Occasionally we have a few good but hard — to — sell boats. When this happens, ELDER BOSUN says "Hold a Dutch Auction". The starting price reflects the fair market value. It is reduced each week by $50. This continues until someone buys the boat or we give it away. This weeks Dutch Auction begins with a 26' Thunderbird, in really good shape with lib, Genon, main, cruising gear and motor which although a collector's item, is still working. Starting price is $4,000, it will be reduced to $3,950. as of 8 a.m. Sat. 23 and $3,900 on Sat 30 and so on. If this isn't your boat look for next week's auction at

COUTURE PATTERN

By LOIS HOLMES

This is the season to make good-looking, good-fitting warm clothes for the kids. A raglan double-breasted coat or blazer, sized for pre-schoolers through young teenagers, is a perfect basic for any back-to-school wardrobe. Self-crocheted buttons and a turn-back collar add the tailored touch to the coat aand an ear-warmer cap in matching pattern is a must for cool days.

Brother's blazer is equally suitable for sister, too, by just reversing the button position. The smart V-neck jumpsuit, also accented with brass buttons, is comfortable and ready for action. The cluster stitch of single crochet, which is used throughout, gives great texture and body, but is easy enough for beginners.

Inexpensive four-ply knitting worsted or synthetic is used so they are quickly made and are tremendous budget-stretchers. Three size ranges are given for each outfit, 4-6, 8-10, 12-14.

To order: Crochet 783, Jumpsuit, Blazer, Coat and Hat, send $1.50 in U.S. funds plus 15 cents for mailing for each pattern (25 cents for air mail) in currency, cheque or money order, to Lois Holmes of California (Victoria Times), Box 1005, Gardena, Calif. 90249. Please print your name, address and pattern number plainly.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

CAHA Accused Of Serving NHL

QUEBEC (CP) — Marius Fortier, general manager of Les Nordiques of the World Hockey Association, says that a recent statement by president Joe Kryczka of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association proves that the latter body is controlled by the National Hockey League.

Reports from Sweden Monday quoted Kryczka as saying that under no circumstances will the WHA be able to arrange a tournament with the national teams of Czechoslovakia or Sweden.

"In refusing to allow the Czechs to come to Canada, the CAHA has proven it is controlled by the NHL," Fortier said.

"I do not understand the CAHA refusing this request, while the same has been granted to Russia, unless there are two weights — two measures," he said.

Kryczka, commenting on arrangements being made between the WHA and the Czechs, said:

"There will be no series between the WHA and the Czechs or Swedes. I have the assurance on a federation-to-federation basis that the Swedes and Czechs will not deal with the WHA."

The CAHA, ruling body in Canada for amateur hockey, is Canadian representative to the International Ice Hockey Federation, the world body, to which Sweden and Czechoslovakia belong.

Kryczka, a Calgary lawyer, said that even if an agreement were reached between the WHA and the Europeans, Canada would be able to veto the agreement through the IIHF.

Mackey Signed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Chargers have signed tight end John Mackey.

Mackey, waived last week by Baltimore Colts, joined San Diego as a free agent. He is president of the National Football League Players' Association.

Bombers Add Steeler Pick

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers, still uncertain how long middle linebacker Mickey Doyle will be on the sidelines, have added Joe Colquitt to the roster.

The Bombers also picked up Canadian defensive tackle Gordon Stewart and released defensive back Mel Smith, another Canadian. Stewart, 250 pounds, was released by Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Colquitt, 230 pounds, attended Kansas State and was drafted seventh by Pittsburgh Steelers, but failed to make the National Football League club.

Dick Redmond Signed By Seals

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League have signed veteran defenceman Dick Redmond.

Redmond, brother of Detroit Red Wings' Mickey Redmond, last year broke two offensive club records for defencemen of 35 assists and 45 points. Both marks previously were held by Carol Vadnais, traded late in the season by the NHL team to Boston Bruins.

Post With Stars

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Murray Williamson, 38, who coached the United States hockey team to a silver medal in the 1972 Winter Olympics, has joined Minnesota North Stars as director of special projects.

Bahamas Independence Slate Given Mandate by Voters

NASSAU, Bahamas (CP) — Prime Minister Lynden Pindling's Progressive Liberal party won a clear mandate to take the Bahamas into complete independence in a landslide general election victory Tuesday.

The PLP overwhelmed a coalition of dissident members and the old white-dominated United Bahamian party to win at least 27 of 38 seats in Parliament's House of Assembly. The PLP held 21 seats in the old House.

The PLP was leading and expected to win in two other contests while the opposition won seven seats and expected to pick up one more. One contest resulted in a tie and a runoff will be held.

The victory, Pindling said, came as "a clear mandate" to continue with his timetable for complete independence from Britain by July 10, 1973.

The opposition Free National Movement had attempted to promote the independence issue as a drastic, unnecessary step which would ruin the country's economy by scaring away foreign investors.

Led by opposition leader Cecil Wallace Whitfield, FNM candidates claimed that independence now would create a drop in the Bahamas' chief industry of tourism and lead to a higher unemployment rate.

The voters didn't agree.

Incomplete returns were not reported from three of the 18 "out island" constituencies. But an unofficial vote count without them showed the PLP received more than 29,000 out of about 48,500 votes. An estimated 85 per cent of the 57,051 registered voters cast ballots. The total population is about 186,000, some 85 per cent of it black.

Pindling has announeed that conferences with British officials on full independence will begin in December and that there is no British opposition to his independence timetable.

The Bahamas would remain a member of the Commonwealth.

The 700-island chain received internal self-government in 1964. Britain currently retains control only over foreign affairs and defence.

Pindling has announced that Parliament will be convened Oct. 18.

At dissolution, the PLP held 21 seats, the FNM 15, the Commonwealth Labor party 1 and an independent 1.

Do-Se-Do Saturday

Do-se-do will be the call of the day, Saturday, as 160 enthusiasts start a week of square dance activities with a trip to Port Angeles for an afternoon dance at Hurricane Ridge.

An evening dance is also planned and from there on in dances — round, square and across the border — are scheduled all week.

Next week has been designated Square Dance Week by 24 clubs of the Vancouver Island Western Square Dancers' Association and the Victoria and District Caller Teachers' Association.

Events include: Square Dance at Peninsula College and the Coast Guard Station hangar, Port Angeles; Round Dance Night, Colwood Community Hall, Monday, 8 p.m.; Square Dance, Royal Oak Community Hall, Wednesday, 8 p.m.; Square Dance, High Rock Junior Secondary School, 637 Head, Saturday, Sept. 30, 8:30 p.m.

Decision Awaited On Expropriation

No decision will be made until November on the amount of compensation to be paid a North Cowichan couple for land expropriation, Judge Montague Drake said Tuesday.

The land was expropriated by B.C. Hydro for a power line easement.

A week-long county court hearing which ended Friday heard the appeal of Mr. and Mrs. George Whittaker against the amount suggested as compensation by a government-appointed appraiser.

The appraiser recommended that $8,744.22 be paid to the Whittakers for the easement which covers about 43 acres.

The Whittakers feel compensation should be between $70,000 and $80,000. Their lawyer, Darral Collins, said they should be compensated for indirect damages to almost 300 acres of land as well as direct damage to the 43 acres.

Judge Drake said all the evidence was presented in the hearing and now both parties will submit written arguments to him. He will make a written decision from those presentations.

The land involved is in the Maple Bay-Birds Eye Cove area of North Cowichan northeast of Quamichan Lake.

Fed-Up Farmer Enters Race

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Rene Benoit, a 67-year-old Dundas County market gardener, said Tuesday he has filed nomination papers to run in the Oct. 30 federal election as a Democrat.

Mr. Benoit, who polled 239 of 18,099 votes in the provincial riding of Grenville-Dundas in the last Ontario election, said he is not an independent because he represents many farmers who are fed up with the old political machines.

Stormont-Dundas was represented in the last Parliament by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, who ran as an Independent and now is running for re-election under the same label.

The only other candidate in the race so far is Conservative Grant Campbell, although the NDP are to hold a nominating meeting tonight.

The Liberals are not contesting the riding.

SCIENCE GOAL: EXCELLENCE IN RESEARCH

OTTAWA (CP) — Primary attention should be concentrated on promoting basic research excellence, whether for specific national needs or to satisfy purely scientific curiosity, a special report by the Science Council of Canada said today.

In its report on policy objectives for basic research, the council restated its support for greater emphasis on special national needs, but added that a significant portion of research must be free from external influences.

"We feel that there is a tendency to over-emphasize the difference between free and oriented research."

The report added that judging the merits of researchers and their work merely on this basis was not justified.

"Attention should first be concentrated on promoting excellence in basic research of either kind."

QUALITY A CONCERN

A concern for quality of research is apparent throughout the report and a section in the appendix said effectiveness of basic research "could be improved in several ways." These included:

—Greater concentration of effort in fewer areas of investigation;

—More emphasis on quality everywhere;

—Better co-ordination of effort and more co-operation between individuals and groups; and —Improved communication among researchers in different fields and in industry, government and universities.

In a personal assessment in the front of the report, Dr. Roger Gaudry called for a special effort to develop a "system which would promote and demand excellence by giving adequate support to the most creative minds."

MUST CO-OPERATE

Dr. Gaudry, council chairman since May and the head of the five-member committee on basic research that prepared the report, also said research must help fulfil, not compete with, educational objectives in universities.

The main report also endorsed a recommendation made in 1969 by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, an international agency that studied the need for a national science policy.

That recommendation said part of fundamental research should be directed toward development needs of a country rather than just to a general increase of knowledge.

The council concluded that basic research policy should ensure vigorous research to: Develop Canadian experts who also are members of the international community of scientists; make contributions to knowledge of particular interest to Canada; maintain the quality of education and influence research and development activities; and prepare a base for meeting future problems.

As well, the council provided two lists of criteria that could be employed in assessing research proposals, one concerned with internal scientific evaluation and one with external technical, social and operational points of view.

The report is the 18th since the council was set up as an advisory body to government in 1966.

Sink Goes Too

ESSEX, Mass. (AP) — Man and nature have taken just about everything—including the kitchen sink — from a home being built here by Donald Wolfe, 22, and his June bride, Bonnie, 19. A storm during Labor Day weekend partially collapsed the structure's foundation. Then thieves broke in and took wedding gifts of silver and china, a wall thermostat, bathroom plumbing fixtures and the sink.

Mideast Peace Hopes Survive Munich

By HARRY DUNPHY

BEIRUT (AP) — Passions ignited by the Munich tragedy will take a long time to subside, and more violence is likely in the Middle East. But the general impetus is toward peace, not war.

In the weeks before Arab terrorists struck at the Israelis' Olympic headquarters, Egypt and Israel showed renewed interest in reaching a negotiated settlement of the 1967 war.

Egypt fundamentally altered the strategic equation in July by expelling thousands of Russian troops and military advisers. Without them and without new Soviet arms, Egypt would be virtually powerless in a new war with Israel.

Until the expulsion, war in some form seemed inevitable.

Now it appears much less likely, but this does not mean that peace is just around the corner.

The thorny, seemingly insoluble problem of Palestinian refugees — and the guerrillas who fight their cause — will continue to upset peace efforts, as they did at Munich.

Israel has warned it will "strike at the terrorist organizations wherever we can," as in the retaliatory air raids in Lebanon and Syria this month.

But Premier Golda Meir added: "The terrorists cannot weaken our desire for peace.

They will not alter our peace policy."

Thus although Munich has thrown up a roadblock to peace moves for a while "the dust will settle and we can start up," an official in Tel Aviv said.

One key to action seems to be the United States and the Useful role it can play by using its political weight to secure an Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands.

Perhaps anticipating post-election pressure from Washington, the inner circle of the Israeli cabinet has been informally discussing what frontiers are needed to guarantee the country's security, but no decision apparently has been reached.

Egypt's primary concern is getting Sinai back. The only realistic way appears to be the U.S. plan for "proximity talks" aimed at an interim agreement to reopen the Suez Canal as a first step. This in turn must await the outcome of the November elections, officials in Cairo believe.

The other linchpin in Egypt's position is that there must be no bargaining on the rights of the Palestinians, but this is purposefully left vague.

The guerrilla attack clearly embarrassed the Egyptian government but the guerrillas are not a major factor in official thinking about a possible settlement.

Palestinian leaders get moral support and the use of a radio transmitter but little else from Egypt, which has almost no resident Palestinian population and keeps tight rein on guerrilla activities.

Two years ago the Palestinian guerrillas represented a dynamic new force in the Arab world. Now the movement seems to be on the ropes.

The organization called Black September has its origins in a civil war that began two years ago this month in Jordan between King Hussein's army and the guerrillas, who were crushed and eventually driven from the country.

That defeat marked the start of the decline of the guerrilla movement and opened a way toward increased peace moves because until then Arab leaders had to take into account the considerable support the guerrillas enjoyed among their populations.

That support has diminished. Today the only major Arab leader still actively backing the guerrillas is Col. Muammer Kadafi of Libya.

The Bout Fans Want to See

THAT'S WHAT ALI'S TRAINER SAYS

FLOYD PATTERSON
. . . special following

By DAVIE BRADY
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Floyd Patterson got top billing on the fight posters as a two-time world heavyweight champion, but Muhammad Ali was partly appeased by the parenthetical notation under his name — "The most famous man in the world."

That is what tonight's 12-round bout in Madison Square Garden is all about anyhow: Ali is defending his title as the best draw in the history of sports.

To the uninitiated in the ways of boxing, it has to come as a surprise that there is any demand for the fight. Ali made a fool of Patterson seven years ago before the bout was stopped in the 12th round, and Patterson now is 37 years old.

There is no betting line this time, because almost nobody but himself gives Patterson a chance to win. He is reputed to be the richest fighter from his earnings, with $4,000,000 salted away. Yet he persists in doing what he says he likes to do most: training and boxing.

Naturally, he is motivated somewhat by revenge. Also, he has a vision of going on to a shot at current champion Joe Frazier and securing a place in the archives that not even Ali would be likely to attain — as the only heavyweight to win the title three times.

Since they do not share his dream, the wonder is why fans would plunk down from $20 to $75 at the Garden to see Patterson face Ali again; 17,000 are expected to contribute to a $500,000 gate.

A couple of boxing's professionals sought to explain the phenomenon.

Harry Markson, director of boxing for the Garden, said: "We all know that Ali has box-office magnetism, even if it were only an exhibition bout. But Patterson has his own special following in New York, no matter whom he fights."

Angelo Dundee, trainer for Ali and manager of a stable of other boxers, who knows the mystique of the fight crowd as well as anyone, reacted as though there should be no question of what is luring spectators. "Because it is the bout the fans want to see," he said matter-of-factly, "and Ali wants to keep fighting regularly."

If their answers were not satisfying, the television arrangements and the guarantees to the participants justified it all.

Closed-circuit telecast seats are going for as high as $12 in Washington. There will be 125 outlets in the United States and Canada, plus 25 community antenna television (CATV) arrangements. There will be 30 overseas telecasts, either by satellite or delayed showings of the taped telecast.

If the casual fan still asks why, the fighters say: Why not? With Ali down for $250,000 or 35 per cent of all revenues, and Patterson $100,000 or 20 per cent.

Cowichan Cards Annual Tourney

DUNCAN — Cowichan amateur Martin Holman is scheduled to defend the title he won last year when the second annual Village Green Open tournament is played Saturday at Cowichan Golf and Country Club.

Duane Says He'll Play

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Running back Duane Thomas joined San Diego Chargers Tuesday, 20 days after being suspended for failure to report to the National Football League team.

Thomas, obtained in a trade with Dallas Cowboys, three times before visited the Chargers briefly but left each time.

A spokesman said, however, that the moody backfield star this time joined the Chargers on the playing field.

Head-coach Harland Svare suspended Thomas and levied a daily $150 fine Aug. 29.

The fines for refusing to report total $3,300.

Although most of the Chargers ended practice for lunch at 12:15 p.m. as scheduled, Thomas stayed, running play patterns. Quarterback John Hadl also stayed through lunch, throwing the ball to Thomas.

Thomas walked with several other Chargers to a team van two hours later and was driven to San Diego Stadium five miles away, the place where he first reported.

"Did you come to play?" somebody asked.

"Yes," Thomas replied.

Another onlooker asked Thomas if he was in shape.

"I'm always in shape," was the reply.

When he was asked why he had waited so long he replied tersely: "What do you think?"

There has been no public explanation why Thomas had refused to report to the Chargers.

Bombing by Mail Now Hits Canada

Times News Services

MONTREAL — An apparent international terrorist campaign against Israeli diplomats spread to Canada today with discovery of a booby-trapped letter to the Israeli consul-general here.

Bomb disposal experts detonated the letter bomb some 30 minutes after it was received in the regular morning mail by Israeli consul Pinchas Shaanan. The letter was posted from Holland.

A similar envelope, postmarked Amsterdam, exploded early Tuesday in the London embassy, killing Israeli agricultural expert Dr. Ami Shachori.

Postal officials were checking the mail around the world today for more bombs, and a further 16 were uncovered and either rendered harmless or exploded. Eight were found in London, two in Jerusalem, four in Geneva and two in Paris.

All the booby-trapped letters were believed posted from Amsterdam.

The Arab guerrilla group Black September — responsible for the Munich massacre of Israeli Olympians — was understood to be at the centre of police inquiries.

The letter uncovered in Montreal "was personally addressed to me," Shaanan said. "It was an ordinary, white envelope but it was tightly closed with a sticker. My name was printed on the sticker.

"It looks as if they have the names of all Israeli officials around the world," he added.

Shaanan said the tight closure of the envelope "made it look suspicious" and police were called.

Police said a special bomb unit under Lieut. Robert Cote removed the booby-trapped letter from the consulate, and, under motorcycle escort, sped to a nearby park area where the bomb was exploded.

Israeli officials at the embassy in Ottawa and at the consulate in Toronto said later that no similar envelopes had yet turned up there.

The devices — reckoned by experts to be the most sophisicated murder weapons used by the terrorists — are only about two inches square and can be easily concealed in innocent-looking small envelopes.

There was speculation the killer weapon was the type used by U.S. forces in Vietnam against the Viet Cong. That device, code-named Gravel, is sprinkled from helicopters along jungle trails used by the Communists. It contains two pellets of plastic explosive.

Sources said the bombs

'Black Hole Of Kampala'

Times News Services

A Canadian tourist among the first 20 persons released from detention in Kampala's central police station Tuesday night said in Nairobi they had been crowded into a room "like the black hole of Calcutta."

Fred Romanik, 26, an instrument engineer from Windsor, Ont., told reporters that from the time he was put in the room on Sunday morning until 2:30 p.m. Monday they had been given no food.

Among them, he said, was a pregnant English woman with a baby. They had to sleep on a concrete floor with no blankets, he said.

Romanik, who went to Uganda to see the Great Murchison Falls, said:

"I was picked up on the street by police on Sunday morning and taken to the central police station.

"They said it was only for one day, and when I protested they just ignored me."

Romanik said he was taken to a room about 40 feet by 20 feet lined with cells in which there were about 40 Europeans.

By Monday night there were about 65 people crowded into the small space, said Romanik.

He said he saw five British journalists brought in at gun point Monday night and lined up against the wall and interrogated. They were then put into the cells.

Meanwhile in Kampala a Ugandan military spokesman said today that Tanzania had moved 1,000 troops to its border with Uganda, together with 55 tanks and artillery pieces.

He said the Uganda army and air force would strike at fresh targets in Tanzania if the need arose.

Earlier, Uganda claimed victory over an invading force that thrust into the southwest from Tanzania with the aim, authorities said, of seizing power from President Adi Amin.

A Uganda military spokesman said Tuesday 300 of the invading force, whose strength was put at around

Uganda Asian refugees are not being guaranteed jobs "and certainly won't get them ahead of Canadians," Prime Minister Trudeau said in St. Catherines, Ont., Tuesday.

"They are coming here and taking their chances as the rest of Canadians," the prime minister said as he resumed campaigning for the Oct. 30 general election.

He said that the Uganda refugees would take jobs that Canadians now will not accept.

He had been told that a number of jobs in Atlantic provinces where unemployment is a chronic problem, "now are going begging" because Maritimers would not work at them, he said.

The same was true in such jobs as picking tobacco and jobs in the fruit industry in Southern Ontario, he said.

"It's a fact that there are some jobs that Canadians don't like to do or don't snap up, and perhaps they will be taken by the Asians who want to settle here," Trudeau stated.

Trudeau said he was sure

N.W.T. COURT RUINS SIFTED

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP) — Police and a civilian dynamite experts were sifting through the ruins of the courthouse today attempting to establish whether a blast last night was caused by dynamite or bomb.

An RCMP spokesman in Yellowknife said the force is considering bringing in an expert from another RCMP headquarters to aid in the investigation.

There was no fire after the explosion, which ripped a huge hole in the building in this community of about 3,500 on the south shore of Great Slave Lake.

A man who had mentioned the possibility of the FLQ blowing up the courthouse before the blast occurred was questioned and released. The area was cordoned off overnight and roadblocks were established throughout the region, about 500 miles north of Edmonton.

SHELLS EXPLODE CLOSE TO THIEU

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist artillery today narrowly missed a convoy carrying President Nguyen Van Thieu and three of his top generals in Quang Tri city. Thieu later vowed that the ruined city, recaptured after 138 days of Communist occupation, would be rebuilt.

Far to the south along the central coast, allied officers said the Communists were using civilians as human shields against air strikes and artillery fire. Officers told Bassett the tactic left 20 civilians dead Monday.

Thieu and his party, who paid a visit to the city to congratulate the Saigon troops on their victory, were headed toward a marine brigade position for awards ceremonies when a 13-mm artillery barrage detonated a nearby ammunition dump. There were no reports of casualties.

The convoy quickly spun around after officers flashed a warning to Thieu's motorcade and sped to marine headquarters at Huong Dien, 18 miles to the south. A Vietnamese officer said: "The VC apparently had his timetable." Another officer said "It was a lucky thing he didn't go any farther."

The U.S. command in Saigon said American jet fighters and B-52s Tuesday flew 310 strikes over North Vietnam, most of them in the

Blood Liquefies On Schedule

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — The dark crystallized substance believers call the blood of St. Januarius liquefied on schedule Tuesday to the joy of Neapolitans angered by Vatican doubts about their "miracle."

A crowd of 5,000 thronging the Naples cathedral intoned a Thanksgiving prayer when their archbishop, Cardinal Corrado Ursi, lifted the phials containing the reputed blood of the city's patron saint and announced it had liquefied. The ringing of church bells brought the good news to persons waiting outside under cloudy skies.

Fishery Pushed

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. — Environment Minister Jack Davis said today that a limited commercial fishery could play an important role in the management of threatened salmon in New Brunswick and parts of Newfoundland. He gave no indication when a commercial fishing ban of the species will be lifted.

Subsidies Curbed

BRUSSELS (AP) — Turbulence in world market prices for cereals following heavy Soviet grain purchase has led the European Economic Community commission to suspend temporarily grain export subsidies, a spokesman for the EEC said today.

Settlement Reached

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tentative settlement of the U.S. capital's one day teachers strike was announced today.

The strike had forced shutdowns at 56 of te city's 183 public schools.

Rocket Launcher Found in Belfast

Times News Services

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — British Army troops seized a 3.5-inch rocket launcher today and said it was "a very important find."

The launcher was found during a routine search of private houses in the Roman Catholic Andersonstown area, a stronghold of the outlawed Irish Republican army.

It is the second rocket launcher scooped up by the army. The other was seized nearly a year ago.

"This is a very important find," an army spokesman said. Guerrilla rockets have been fired several times, usually to little effect when the warheads did not explode. Also found were some partly-made bombs, a rifle and ammunition.

British forces said they hit two gunmen earlier today in a flarelit battle in a cemetery near Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital, target of threatened attack by the IRA.

DEADLINE PASSES

The battle erupted a few hours after expiration of an IRA-set midnight deadline for British Army evacuation of the hospital grounds.

It focused in and around a Roman Catholic cemetery and Falls Park, areas near the hospital, with troops firing flares aloft to pinpoint the hiding places of at least four gunmen, the British Army said.

Soldiers reported hitting one gunman in the cemetery and another on the roof of a community centre in White Rock Road.

There were no British casualties.

BUSINESSMAN HELD

A Belfast company director was held captive for eight hours Tuesday by a group of armed men, apparently members of the extremist Saor Eire (Free Ireland) organization.

Patrick Mackie, 42, said he was kidnapped as he drove to work, taken to a house in an area he did not know, then finally allowed to walk away in the evening.

Mackie, a director of Mackie Engineering, Belfast's largest engineering firm, said he thought they had wanted to use his car "for a job" but he had no idea what it was.

Saor Eire has been blamed for a string of bank robberies in Ulster.

Canadian Emphasis Urged on Research

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Science Council of Canada today urged that more scientific research in this country be oriented towards "areas of special interest to Canada."

But at the same time, the council added that a significant proportion of that research must continue to be conducted "free from any influences external to the inner logic of science itself."

Report No. 18 on basic research policy objectives recommends that attention should first be concentrated on promoting excellence in basic research of either kind, free or oriented. (See report on Page 53).

Marchand Defends 'Spying'

Times News Services

QUEBEC — While Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand was saying it is perfectly normal for the armed forces to be interested in society's problems, a spokesman for the forces said an investigation has been launched to find out how a document was leaked.

"Do you know any other country in the world where the army doesn't do the same thing?" Marchand asked. "In the United States, in Italy, in France, in Communist China, in Russia, in the United Kingdom . . ."

It is an acceptable practice and no cause for worry, he said.

The document is the report made public by Parti Quebecois Leader Rene Levesque which Levesque said showed the army is spying on Quebec labor unions.

An armed forces spokesman acknowledged there was a report but said it was compiled from public sources as part of a program of information-gathering used to brief senior officers being transferred to other parts of the country.

Meanwhile, a Liberal cabinet minister, C. M. Drury, and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette criticised Levesque.

Drury, who is acting defence minister, dismissed the report's disclosure as an election "gimmick."

"This is part of Mr. Levesque's technique to produce information to see if he can get into a fight with federal authorities," Drury told a small gathering of Liberal party supporters in his riding of Westmount.

Caouette also accused Levesque of playing politics.

"When one is not afraid of himself and is not afraid for his actions, he would not care too much about such reports because reports are made throughout Canada on different activities," he said in an interview.

Caouette said Levesque "is trying again to play politics with his good friend Marcel Pepin, and those people who are trying to break Canada will find anything suitable to them to try and play politics with it."

Korea Question Top UN Issue

Times News Services

UNITED NATIONS — A full list of contentious items including the Korean question is on the agenda for a meeting of the 25-country steering committee today and Thursday.

The task of the committee is to decide whether the proposed items should be discussed in one of the assembly's seven major committees, in the main assembly itself — or discussed not at all.

Among the leading questions, in addition to Korea, are international terrorism, financial disagreements, the Middle East, and environmental matters such as sea rights and pollution.

The Soviet Union, China and 26 other countries have requested for a full-scale debate on the Korean question.

Those who want the debate are seeking the ouster from South Korea of UN Command troops remaining there since the Korean War. Although 16 countries fought alongside the South Koreans in the 1950-53 war, virtually all remaining troops are American.

Led by the United States and Britain, Western countries will attempt to have any Korean debate deferred for a year. They say that debate on the question would interfere with talks that have recently opened between North and South Korea.

The session opened Tuesday with the election of Stanislaw Trepczynski, a deputy foreign minister of Poland, as assembly president. Trepczynski delivered an inaugural address that spoke optimistically about some areas of world diplomacy but came down hard on the U.S. role in Indochina.

Trepczynski, only the second Communist to be elected assembly president, said the Vietnam war "cannot be justified any longer on logical grounds by any stretch of the imagination."

He referred to Indochina as a place "where blood continues to flow, where innocent people are dying — women and children, whose modest belongings are being destroyed — where the monuments of ancient civilizations are being turned to ruins."

Trepczynski also was disappointed because there have been "no signs of a lasting peace" in the Middle East, but spoke hopefully of new moves toward detente in Europe.

OCTOBER SESSION CERTAIN

Premier Barrett said today there will definitely be a fall session of the B.C. legislature "sometime in October."

The date has not been set, Barrett said.

Barrett made the statement following the first meeting of his NDP government cabinet, which also examined a report from Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi on increases in social assistance payments.

In response to a question, Barrett said there is no truth to the suggestion that the fall session is being planned to disrupt the federal election Oct. 30.

He said if the suggestion came from any politician, the constituents should assess the man's credibility.

That Mysterious 'Public' —Never Underestimate It

Apart from being the sprightliest dialogue to come out of the wastes of TVland in a very long time, the confrontation between William Buckley and Anthony Wedgwood Benn, on the program "Firing Line," briefly ventilated the most perplexing, perhaps the most important question in what we choose to call the western world.

The question simply is whether public opinion, in a democratic way of life that we assume to be controlled by it, matters a damn.

It was Buckley, every inch the spokesman for the elite, against Benn, perhaps the brightest man in the uneven ranks of the British Labor Party, himself of the aristocracy, yet clearly convinced that public opinion, in the long run, determines a democratic nation's future.

When the former minister of technology expressed his belief that the electorate — that is, public opinion in its rare moment of power — is more interested in representatives than in managers I was dying to know if W. A. C. Bennett was watching and, if so, what his reaction might be. If ever there was a classic case of under-estimating the public temper it was that of the man widely thought to be the wiliest politician ever produced in these climes.

In retrospect, it seems clear that Mr. Bennett's undoing lay in a party campaign based on a covert contempt of the average man. The massive departmental advertisements, crassly designed as political promotion with public funds, the television commercials offering the testimonials of Social Credit's strange bedfellows, the extravagant promises of the so-called Kelowna Charter, all seem motivated by a conviction that public opinion is not merely brainless, but purchasable.

It wasn't just Mr. Bennett and his advisers who made the miscalculation. A poll taken by the Vancouver Sun's Allan Fotheringham, asking the prediction of a large number of people presumed to have a finger on the public pulse, showed that, to a man, they expected Social Credit to return to power. This, too, was in the nature of an unwitting expression of contempt for public opinion. I'm not at all proud that I was among them.

The difficulty with assessing the mood or the convictions of the amorphous mass of individuals we call "the people" is that there's no easy reading of their temperature. Cliche or not, the public is an iceberg. The visible part is the opinion of small groups that can only pretend to be representing the mass, through their own vocal convictions. No one at any time can say with certainty what heaving goes on beneath the surface.

There's a great temptation to think the worst of it, as Mr. Bennett apparently did, to believe that it will respond to the carrot or the whip like any other jack-ass.

If, for example, you subscribe to the consumer magazines, you find all-too-abundant evidence that "the people" are readily and ceaselessly conned in the market place.

One such review, covering the field of cosmetics, shows that enormous profits are made from a gullible public, that two-thirds of the total cost of marketing the average cosmetic product goes to advertising, only a third to its manufacture, and the poor, sappy consumer will unquestioningly accept a scandalous mark-up.

★ ★ ★

The author of this particular study concludes that the average consumer, therefore, is easily manipulated, that he may be implanted with fear, in this case the spectre of social failure without using the product in question. Public opinion, in other words, may be created to serve any given end.

I'm not at all sure that you can make this easy generalization. It's true that "the people" may be conditioned by such advertising, that there are feelings of insecurity and a desire to conform that are exploitable. But counter to this there's just as much evidence that the mass of the people have a kind of native, intuitive intelligence that can only be described as common sense.

Those who deal in any continuing way with the public have a vast respect for this common sense.

Retailers will tell you any hard sales technique may work, but that the over-sell will always cause the reaction of skepticism.

Publishers and editors, sometimes accused of tailoring their product for a 13-year-old mentality, do no such thing. "Talking down" to a reader has been demonstrated too many times as the ultimate sin of journalism.

Lawyers will always choose a jury, drawn from this mysterious mass, rather than a trial judge if their client will benefit from a verdict of common sense rather than one based on the subtletics of the law.

A third of all winning race horses are favorites — the public's choice.

Perhaps, in the long haul, it comes down to that familiar quotation: "You may fool all the people some of the time; you can even fool some of the people all the time; but you can't fool all of the people all the time." Abe Lincoln said it. No politician, no one who lives off "the people," should ever forget it.

Breakwater Project Starts Soon

Pacific Pile Driving Company, of Victoria, was low bidder at $179,835 when tenders were opened Tuesday for construction of new breakwaters at Oak Bay Marina.

A spokesman for the department of public works in Vancouver said today the contract should be awarded within days.

★

Bob Wright, president of the marina, estimates that work will begin in about two weeks.

An extension of 75 feet will be built on the present breakwater and a 350-foot spur will be constructed shoreward from Mary Tod Island as shown in picture at left.

The construction is to provide safer moorage during southeasterly winter gales.

Two mainland companies also tendered on the job. Fraser River Pile Driving Co. Ltd. bid $222,846 and the Bellingham Corporation Canada Ltd. of North Vancouver, $269,100.

Midnight Prowlers To Clean Up

At dead of night two men will prowl the streets of downtown Victoria next summer.

But they won't be on dirty business. Quite the opposite.

Operating a specially converted truck equipped with 500-gallon water tank, pump, hose and floodlight, the men will spray city sidewalks in a trial $10,000 program approved by city council's public works committee on Tuesday.

Idea for the April-to September nocturnal washing program came from downtown merchants who found that sweeping has little effect on dusty, dirt-encrusted sidewalks.

City engineer James Garnett warned aldermen, though, that the program may not be without snags.

Damage and nuisance could result from spraying store fronts, under doors and over basements below the sidewalk, he pointed out.

Garnett said the crews will do their best to avoid such incidents, but they could arise and the possibility "must be anticipated and accepted."

Pollen to Press Barrett On Four City Objectives

Mayor Peter Pollen has written to Premier Dave Barrett asking for the NDP government to tackle four problems of immediate concern to the city.

—The proposed Blanshard Street extension, first mooted more than 10 years ago and never implemented by the Social Credit government.

They are:

—The proposed Blanshard Street extension, first mooted more than 10 years ago and never implemented by the Social Credit government.

—the necessity for coming to an early decision on sewage disposal, which Pollen termed a "national disgrace."

—Confirmation that the new government will adhere to past policies of the Capital Improvement District Commission and allocate funds for beautification of the Inner Harbor.

—And a request that Victoria's views be considered in future development of the so-called provincial government precinct surrounding the Legislative Buildings.

The last, Pollen said in an interview Tuesday, was probably the most important of the four requests as "this area is becoming, in our opinion, very congested and too concentrated."

He said city council believes that good planning dictates the need for dispersal of government buildings, particulary to the north of the city, so as to avoid concentrated traffic build-up.

"I was delighted to hear this bright, young premier say on television the other night that before anything is done about government precincts they will discuss this with the city of Victoria," Pollen said.

"That's magnificently refreshing compared with the prior government."

Pollen said he stressed in his letter that unless early action is taken on the Blanshard Street extension plan, all "options will be removed" by buildings going up in the path of the proposed highway.

Designed to serve as a major artery feeding the city core, Blanshard was to connect with the Patricia Bay Highway and also, via an overpass system across Douglas, with the Trans-Canada Highway.

New Pitch Next Year For 'Privileged Crew'

Buses waiting to take visitors on sightseeing trips around the city are a familiar sight on the Causeway — but apparently not for too much longer.

Next summer, if city council accepts a recommendation of the public works committee, operators of the vehicles will not be allowed to park on the Causeway outside the Empress.

At its meeting Tuesday the committee also agreed that the number of parking spaces allowed sightseeing vehicles on city streets should be cut from eight to four — but didn't stipulate where these should be.

City traffic engineer Dave Campbell was instructed to recommend where such parking should be permitted.

The subject of Causeway parking has been a sore one in city hall for some months, with repeated complaints about the increasing number of sightseeing and tally-ho vehicles, as well as complaints from several aldermen that the operators should be paying more for their trade licences.

However, Mayor Peter Pollen said in an interview following Tuesday's meeting that he does not consider the recommended parking ban unfair.

In the long term, he said, it will prove beneficial to the community generally and to the operators specifically.

"We are not interested in jeopardizing their livelihood, or their attempts to develop excitement and drama in the tourist industry.

"What we are concerned about is the developing noise, chaos and huckstering on the Causeway."

During the meeting, Pollen told aldermen that the operators are "an incredibly privileged crew" requiring little capital investment and making little cash return to the city where they do good business.

A report from assessor-collector Alf Joyce listed a number of parcels of vacant land within three or four blocks of the Causeway which could be utilized for off-street parking by sightseeing firms.

Under the city's private "charter" of 1919 with the provincial government, the maximum licence fee allowed is $140 per vehicle, and this can only be changed by amending the act.

However, the committee is recommending that the city seek to establish trade licence classifications and fees under the Municipal Act, to give more direct power for revision through the appropriate bylaw.

Television Goes Underground

Television is invading every facet of modern life — and sewers are no exception.

Esquimalt municipality is nearing completion of a two-week sewer inspection project using a closed circuit TV-monitoring system.

Inspecting about 2,400 feet of sewage pipe a day, at a cost of 15 cents a foot, a private inspection firm, Mar-Tech Enterprises, plans to cover five miles of the 28-mile Esquimalt sewer system.

The process, which is being used by a growing number of firms across North America, is relatively simple but calls for highly sophisticated electronic equipment.

A tubular camera, originally designed for underwater oil exploration and costing about $9,000, is pulled on a cable through the sewer pipe, from one manhole to the next.

The picture is monitored on a nine-inch TV set in a truck waiting on the street.

A three-man crew is required for the job, one man in the truck and one at either manhole.

The man in the truck watches the monitor, recording conditions and the position of each service entry into the main pipe. Whenever a problem is detected, such as root intrusions, blockages or misaligned joints, the monitor attendant radios the men on the cable to stop the camera while he photographs the problem on the screen with another 35 mm. camera.

The firm is equipped to produce a video tape of the whole sewer line but since most of the pipe is in good condition the municipality only requires the location and picture of any problem spot.

PAVERS SCOLDED

The Capital Regional District has told OK Paving Ltd. that it has been operating an asphalt manufacturing plant illegally at a gravel pit between Humpback and Sooke Lake roads.

A district spokesman said the letter pointed out that the property is in a limied agriculure zone. Extraction of gravel was permitted "but blacktop mixing plants are prohibited."

Residents have complained about noise and the stench of tar.

CITY PAIR KILLED IN ONTARIO

Two Victoria residents were killed and six other persons injured Tuesday in a three-car crash near Espanola, Ont., 42 miles west of Sudbury.

Dead are Cecil Risebrow, 53, of 3120 Yew, and Mary Emma Fairbrother, 58, of 325 Irving.

Burn-Out Sparks Firemens' Hopes

Millstream landfill fire is burning briskly today and officials at Langford fire department are hopeful their attempts to "burn the fire out" may be successful.

Two bulldozers, a front-end loader and seven men are working at the underground fire for the third day, opening up channels and churning up the ground to encourage complete combustion of the refuse.

Once a real fire is going, officials hope there will be less smoke and less chance of it re-igniting next spring.

Project co-ordinator A. J. Chmelaskas said if their efforts to encourage the fire are not successful they will move to the second alternative of spreading the refuse and dousing the fire completely. Heavy rain during the week may force them into this alternative.

Cost of the project is estimated at $1,000 to $1,500 a day.

EDUCATION STUDENT WINS CARL BURSARY

Bruce D. Runyan, a fourth-year education student at University of Victoria, has been awarded the $300 G. Clifford Carl Memorial Bursary by the Friends of the Provincial Museum.

Presented for the first time this year, the bursary is a tribute to the late Dr. G. Clifford Carl, former director of the museum and is given to a deserving third or fourth year student at UVic.

Runyan has worked as a naturalist for the provincial parks branch during three summers.

Secret School Surveyor Surfaces

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The mysterious man with the secret survey has ended his game of hide-and-seek with local school authorities.

Michael Marshall, vice-principal of Elizabeth Fisher Junior High School in the Sooke School District, came out of the woodwork Tuesday by telephoning local school offices and revealing that he is the man behind a questionnaire mailed out to 900 Victoria residents last week.

Marshall told the Times today he did it all on his own as a summer project and was going to refer the information gathered from the surveys to the Sooke, Saanich Peninsula and Greater Victoria school boards.

"Being a person involved in making minor educational decisions, I realized that there was a notable lack of information available on educational matters," Marshall said.

He decided that there was two ways to get the information he felt would be valuable: have an outside firm do a survey for him or do the whole thing himself.

He decided to go it alone and paid a total of $300 for printing costs, envelopes and stationery. "Now I know what it's like to lick 900 envelopes."

Marshall felt that if he used his own name and position on the letter accompanying the questionnaire forms, people would not take him seriously, so he went to the library and found a name for a firm, Educational Planning Services, which would not violate any laws if he used it.

He signed his name, "M. Marshall," as president of the firm, and sent out the questionnaires late last week.

So far he has received about 25 per cent of the surveys back in the mail, a response he terms "not too bad."

Marshall, who has experience in the marketing research field, still intends to turn his results over to the local school boards for their use and is convinced the information he compiles will prove useful.

He said he didn't think the project would backfire and did not intend it to baffle local educational authorities as it did.

Shortly after his questionnaires were delivered around the city, the Greater Victoria school board received a number of inquiries about the survey. The board knew nothing about it and went to the extent of issuing a press statement dissociating itself from the survey.

When Marshall read of the board's action in Tuesday newspapers, he telephoned all three school district offices and said he was behind the survey and that it was an individual project.

He expects to be able to work on the results over the next several weekends in his spare time.

Bombing by Mail Now Hits Canada

Times News Services

MONTREAL — An apparent international terrorist campaign against Israeli diplomats spread to Canada today with discovery of a booby-trapped letter to the Israeli consul-general here.

Bomb disposal experts detonated the letter bomb some 30 minutes after it was received in the regular morning mail by Israeli consul Pinchas Shaanan. The letter was posted from Holland.

A similar envelope, postmarked Amsterdam, exploded early Tuesday in the London embassy, killing Israeli agricultural expert Dr. Ami Shachori.

Postal officials were checking the mail around the world today for more bombs, and a further 16 were uncovered and either rendered harmless or exploded. Eight were found in London, two in Jerusalem, four in Geneva and two in Paris.

All the booby-trapped letters were believed posted from Amsterdam.

The Arab guerrilla group Black September — responsible for the Munich massacre of Israeli Olympians — was understood to be at the centre of police inquiries.

The letter uncovered in Montreal "was personally addressed to me," Shaanan said. "It was an ordinary, white envelope but it was tightly closed with a sticker. My name was printed on the sticker.

"It looks as if they have the names of all Israeli officials around the world," he added.

Shaanan said the tight closure of the envelope "made it look suspicious" and police were called.

Police said a special bomb unit under Lieut. Robert Cote removed the booby-trapped letter from the consulate, and, under motorcycle escort, sped to a nearby park area where the bomb was exploded.

Israeli officials at the embassy in Ottawa and at the consulate in Toronto said later that no similar envelopes had yet turned up there.

The devices — reckoned by experts to be the most sophisicated murder weapons used by the terrorists — are only about two inches square and can be easily concealed in innocent-looking small envelopes.

There was speculation the killer weapon was the type used by U.S. forces in Vietnam against the Viet Cong. That device, code-named Gravel, is sprinkled from helicopters along jungle trails used by the Communists. It contains two pellets of plastic explosive.

Sources said the bombs

Leaving Vancouver police station Tuesday on way to Montreal to face questioning in connection with a fire in a cabaret are Joseph Boutin, 21, left and James O'Brien, 23. Thirty-seven persons were killed in the fire. The two were picked up by Vancouver police in a drug raid.

'Black Hole Of Kampala'

Times News Services

A Canadian tourist among the first 20 persons released from detention in Kampala's central police station Tuesday night said in Nairobi they had been crowded into a room "like the black hole of Calcutta."

Fred Romanik, 26, an instrument engineer from Windsor, Ont., told reporters that from the time he was put in the room on Sunday morning until 2:30 p.m. Monday they had been given no food.

Among them, he said, was a pregnant English woman with a baby. They had to sleep on a concrete floor with no blankets, he said.

Romanik, who went to Uganda to see the Great Murchison Falls, said:

"I was picked up on the street by police on Sunday morning and taken to the central police station.

"They said it was only for one day, and when I protested they just ignored me."

Romanik said he was taken to a room about 40 feet by 20 feet lined with cells in which there were about 40 Europeans.

By Monday night there were about 65 people crowded into the small space, said Romanik.

He said he saw five British journalists brought in at gun point Monday night and lined up against the wall and interrogated. They were then put into the cells.

Meanwhile in Kampala a Ugandan military spokesman said today that Tanzania had moved 1,000 troops to its border with Uganda, together with 55 tanks and artillery pieces.

He said the Uganda army and air force would strike at fresh targets in Tanzania if the need arose.

Earlier, Uganda claimed victory over an invading force that thrust into the southwest from Tanzania with the aim, authorities said, of seizing power from President Adi Amin.

A Uganda military spokesman said Tuesday 300 of the invading force, whose strength was put at around

Uganda Asian refugees are not being guaranteed jobs "and certainly won't get them ahead of Canadians," Prime Minister Trudeau said in St. Catherines, Ont., Tuesday.

"They are coming here and taking their chances as the rest of Canadians," the prime minister said as he resumed campaigning for the Oct. 30 general election.

He said that the Uganda refugees would take jobs that Canadians now will not accept.

He had been told that a number of jobs in Atlantic provinces where unemployment is a chronic problem, "now are going begging" because Maritimers would not work at them, he said.

The same was true in such jobs as picking tobacco and jobs in the fruit industry in Southern Ontario, he said.

"It's a fact that there are some jobs that Canadians don't like to do or don't snap up, and perhaps they will be taken by the Asians who want to settle here," Trudeau stated.

Trudeau said he was sure

N.W.T. COURT RUINS SIFTED

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP) — Police and a civilian dynamite experts were sifting through the ruins of the courthouse today attempting to establish whether a blast last night was caused by dynamite or bomb.

An RCMP spokesman in Yellowknife said the force is considering bringing in an expert from another RCMP headquarters to aid in the investigation.

There was no fire after the explosion, which ripped a huge hole in the building in this community of about 3,500 on the south shore of Great Slave Lake.

A man who had mentioned the possibility of the FLQ blowing up the courthouse before the blast occurred was questioned and released. The area was cordoned off overnight and roadblocks were established throughout the region, about 500 miles north of Edmonton.

SHELLS EXPLODE CLOSE TO THIEU

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist artillery today narrowly missed a convoy carrying President Nguyen Van Thieu and three of his top generals in Quang Tri city. Thieu later vowed that the ruined city, recaptured after 138 days of Communist occupation, would be rebuilt.

Far to the south along the central coast, allied officers said the Communists were using civilians as human shields against air strikes and artillery fire. Officers told Bassett the tactic left 20 civilians dead Monday.

Thieu and his party, who paid a visit to the city to congratulate the Saigon troops on their victory, were headed toward a marine brigade position for awards ceremonies when a 13-mm artillery barrage detonated a nearby ammunition dump. There were no reports of casualties.

The convoy quickly spun around after officers flashed a warning to Thieu's motorcade and sped to marine headquarters at Huong Dien, 18 miles to the south. A Vietnamese officer said: "The VC apparently had his timetable," Another officer said "It was a lucky thing he didn't go any farther."

The U.S. command in Saigon said American jet fighters and B-52s Tuesday flew 310 strikes over North Vietnam, most of them in the

NEWS BRIEFS

Blood Liquefies On Schedule

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — The dark crystallized substance believers call the blood of St. Januarius liquefied on schedule Tuesday to the joy of Neapolitans angered by Vatican doubts about their "miracle."

A crowd of 5,000 thronging the Naples cathedral intoned a Thanksgiving prayer when their archbishop, Cardinal Corrado Ursi, lifted the phials containing the reputed blood of the city's patron saint and announced it had liquefied. The ringing of church bells brought the good news to persons waiting outside under cloudy skies.

Fishery Pushed

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. — Environment Minister Jack Davis said today that a limited commercial fishery could play an important role in the management of threatened salmon in New Brunswick and parts of Newfoundland. He gave no indication when a commercial fishing ban of the species will be lifted.

Rocket Launcher Found in Belfast

Times News Services

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — British Army troops seized a 3.5-inch rocket launcher today and said it was "a very important find."

The launcher was found during a routine search of private houses in the Roman Catholic Andersonstown area, a stronghold of the outlawed Irish Republican army.

It is the second rocket launcher scooped up by the army. The other was seized nearly a year ago.

"This is a very important find," an army spokesman said. Guerrilla rockets have been fired several times, usually to little effect when the warheads did not explode. Also found were some partly-made bombs, a rifle and ammunition.

British forces said they hit two gunmen earlier today in a flarelit battle in a cemetery near Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital, target of threatened attack by the IRA.

DEADLINE PASSES

The battle erupted a few hours after expiration of an IRA-set midnight deadline for British Army evacuation of the hospital grounds.

It focused in and around a Roman Catholic cemetery and Falls Park, areas near the hospital, with troops firing flares aloft to pinpoint the hiding places of at least four gunmen, the British Army said.

Soldiers reported hitting one gunman in the cemetery and another on the roof of a community centre in White Rock Road.

There were no British casualties.

BUSINESSMAN HELD

A Belfast company director was held captive for eight hours Tuesday by a group of armed men, apparently members of the extremist Saor Eire (Free Ireland) organization.

Patrick Mackie, 42, said he was kidnapped as he drove to work, taken to a house in an area he did not know, then finally allowed to walk away in the evening.

Mackie, a director of Mackie Engineering, Belfast's largest engineering firm, said he thought they had wanted to use his car "for a job" but he had no idea what it was.

Saor Eire has been blamed for a string of bank robberies in Ulster.

VICTORY of Prime Minister Lynden Pindling's Progressive Liberal Party in the Bahamas general election Tuesday is seen as a mandate to bring the colony to full independence. (See story Page 52.)

Canadian Emphasis Urged on Research

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Science Council of Canada today urged that more scientific research in this country be oriented towards "areas of special interest to Canada."

But at the same time, the council added that a significant proportion of that research must continue to be conducted "free from any influences external to the inner logic of science itself."

Report No. 18 on basic research policy objectives recommends that attention should first be concentrated on promoting excellence in basic research of either kind, free or oriented. (See report on Page 53).

Marchand Defends 'Spying'

Times News Services

QUEBEC — While Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand was saying it is perfectly normal for the armed forces to be interested in society's problems, a spokesman for the forces said an investigation has been launched to find out how a document was leaked.

"Do you know any other country in the world where the army doesn't do the same thing?" Marchand asked. "In the United States, in Italy, in France, in Communist China, In Russia, in the United Kingdom . . ."

It is an acceptable practice and no cause for worry, he said.

The document is the report made public by Parti Quebecois Leader Rene Levesque which Levesque said showed the army is spying on Quebec labor unions.

An armed forces spokesman acknowledged there was a report but said it was compiled from public sources as part of a program of information-gathering used to brief senior officers being transferred to other parts of the country.

Meanwhile, a Liberal cabinet minister, C. M. Drury, and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette criticised Levesque.

Drury, who is acting defence minister, dismissed the report's disclosure as an election "gimmick."

"This is part of Mr. Levesque's technique to produce information to see if he can get into a fight with federal authorities," Drury told a small gathering of Liberal party supporters in his riding of Westmount.

Caouette also accused Levesque of playing politics.

"When one is not afraid of himself and is not afraid for his actions, he would not care too much about such reports because reports are made throughout Canada on different activities," he said in an interview.

Caouette said Levesque "is trying again to play politics with his good friend Marcel Pepin, and those people who are trying to break Canada will find anything suitable to them to try and play politics with it."

Korea Question Top UN Issue

Times News Services

UNITED NATIONS — A full list of contentious items including the Korean question is on the agenda for a meeting of the 25-country UN steering committee today and Thursday.

The task of the committee is to decide whether the proposed items should be discussed in one of the assembly's seven major committees, in the main assembly itself — or discussed not at all.

Among the leading questions, in addition to Korea, are international terrorism, financial disagreements, the Middle East, and environmental matters such as sea rights and pollution.

The Soviet Union, China and 26 other countries have requested a full-scale debate on the Korean question.

Those who want the debate are seeking the ouster from South Korea of UN Command troops remaining there since the Korean War. Although 16 countries fought alongside the South Koreans in the 1950-53 war, virtually all remaining troops are American.

Led by the United States and Britain, Western countries will attempt to have any Korean debate deferred for a year. They say that debate on the question would interfere with talks that have recently opened between North and South Korea.

The session opened Tuesday with the election of Stanislaw Trepczynski, a deputy foreign minister of Poland, as assembly president. Trepczynski delivered an inaugural address that dealt optimistically with some areas of world diplomacy but came down hard on the U.S. role in Indochina.

Trepczynski, only the second Communist to be elected assembly president, said the Vietnam war "cannot be justified any longer on logical grounds by any stretch of the imagination."

He referred to Indochina as a place "where blood continues to flow, where innocent people are dying — women and children, whose modest belongings are being destroyed — where the monuments of ancient civilizations are being turned to ruins."

Trepczynski also was disappointed because there have been "no signs of a lasting peace" in the Middle East, but spoke hopefully of new moves toward detente in Europe.

OCTOBER SESSION CERTAIN

Premier Barrett said today there will definitely be a fall session of the B.C. legislature "sometime in October."

The date has not been set, Barrett said.

Barrett made the statement following the first meeting of his NDP government cabinet, which also examined a report from Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi on increases in social assistance payments.

In response to a question, Barrett said there is no truth to the suggestion that the fall session is being planned to disrupt the federal election Oct. 30.

He said if the suggestion came from any politician, his constituents should assess the man's credibility.
